ELKS TO ORGANIZE.

Lodge is a Sure Thing in This City.
All Preliminaries Arranged.

During the past week a paper was circulated by Will Carey for the purpose of feeling of the business men to see if they desired the organization of
a lodge of the Elks in this city and the rapidity and ease with which the
names were secured showed that there
would be no trouble in securing a sufficient number. About forty representative men were secured in a very short time without any solicitation
whatsoever, and there is no doubt that
the lodge will be formed in the near future.

The lodge here will have to be organized under the auspices of the Stevens Point lodge, that being the
nearest city to this place that has an organization of this sort. Members
of Marshfield and Wausau lodges have
expressed a willingness and intention
to attend in a body should a lodge be organized here. The following names
are now on the list to go in as charter
members:

B. R. Goggin J. C. Condit Samuel Church Chas. F. Kruger Isaac P. Witter Aug. C. Otto John A. Jagger Thos. A. Taylor Wm. F. Kellogg L. M. Slatterer Ray A. Love A. L. Ridgman Wm. J. Conway Guy Dutcher F. J. Wood Albert E. Lichty John E. Daly O. T. Hungen Wm. E. Wheeler Oscar Hathaway Harry Sanderson	D. D. Conway F. L. Steb Wm. H. Reeves Wm. H. Barnes W. G. Scott Chas. Pomphrey W. A. Dugan Arthur Miller Alphonso B. Euter Alex. Muir Otto R. Rossmis Edward J. Whitney Chas. A. Blum Robt. W. Morse Michael Slattery Ernest Oberbeck Wm. Scott Chas. F. Kellogg F. L. Konrke Michael Boggs

On Sunday afternoon at two o'clock
a meeting will be held at the K. P.
hall for the purpose of electing officers
and effecting a temporary organization. The Elks, wherever an organization exists, are always a popular
organization, and there is no doubt
that the lodge in this city will be no
exception to the rule.

Charged with Assault.

Adam Miller was arrested on Wednesday on complaint of John Jadack on a charge of assault with intention to do great bodily harm, and was placed in the county jail by Deputy Sheriff Warzinski of Marshfield.

Both parties reside at Milladore and
the trouble started from a saloon row,
during which Miller struck Jadack on
the head with an iron poker, inflicting
a severe scalp wound. Jadack and
son then turned in together and thrashed Miller. Miller had come to this city to have the Jadacks arrested,
but the latter had been too quick for
him and got out their warrant first.
This is the story is told by the different parties. Miller's hearing was set for the 23rd instant.

Killed at Tomahawk.

A railroad fatality occurred on Saturday morning at Tomahawk through
a collision, resulting from an open
switch. Freight train number 96,
south bound, left the rails within the city of Tomahawk and collided with a
car on another track, which was loaded with pulpwood. Harry Kerr,
brakeman on the freight, was endeavoring to disconnect the air between the cars when the accident occurred to the train. He was thrown forcibly between the moving cars and jammed to death. His head was dis-
figured almost beyond recognition.
Kerr's parents reside at Portage.—

Nearly a Blaze.

An alarm of fire on Tuesday afternoon brought out a large crowd and
investigation proved that the sister's
house, which stands in the rear of the Catholic church, was on fire. Those who had collected managed to extinguish the blaze, however, before the engine arrived.

The fire originated from the grass
which had been burned about the house and worked under the siding
and up between the studding, filling
the house with smoke and making it appear of a serious nature. A few dollars will repair the damage caused
by tearing off boards.

Died Suddenly.

Nellie Campbell, the 17 year old daughter of Robert Campbell of Dex-
terville, died very suddenly on Wednesday morning from what the
doctors pronounced heart failure.
The young lady had been in good spirits and apparently in perfect
health the night before and retired in
this condition and in the morning she apparently tried to call for help and
expired almost immediately, being dead when her relatives reached the bedside.

For Beating His Wife.

Officer Mike Griffin of Marshfield
came down on Thursday having in charge Al Loucks, who had been
arrested on a charge of wife beating,
and he was placed in the county jail
to await his examination, which will
occur on the 19th inst.

It is claimed that Loucks had been drinking for some time and had an altercation with his wife, during
which he struck her several heavy
blows in the face, inflicting a black eye and other bruises. When the manner in which he had treated his wife became known the populace was indignant and there were threats of
giving him a coat of tar and feathers,
and, in fact, had made preparations
to do this when the officers of the law
stepped in and arrested Loucks to prevent him coming to harm.

Only a few years ago Loucks was a well-to-do man at Marshfield, being
the proprietor of a well stocked livery
stable and his downfall has been brought about by over indulgence in
liquor, and he is still an exemplary citizen when not under the influence of intoxicants.

High School Notes.

After a week's vacation school was begun again Monday morning with very favorable appearances. There are eight more weeks during which
time much difficult and important
work must be done.

will instruct the class for the remainder of the year in place of Mr. Blynd.

Mr. Hambrecht has been performing many experiments during the last
few evenings with the electric lantern
and so far has been very successful.

The Juniors are making great preparation for May 3rd and expect to make their Prom the ball of the season.

Next week is examination week
which means much hard work for the
teachers as well as the pupils.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg
with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years
he suffered intensely. Then the best

writes, I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 11-2 boxes of Bucklin's
Arnica salve and my leg was sound
and well as ever." For eruptions,

OLD SETTLERS MEET.

Annual Reunion Held at the Opera
Hall Thursday Evening.

The old settlers held their meeting
at the opera house Thursday evening,
but the attendance was not as large
as had been expected by the interest
shown at former meetings of this kind. After those present had registered, the program was opened by a selection by the mandolin club. The president, R. E. McFarland, then
made an opening address, touching on
the mission of the meeting and welcoming the old settlers to their annual reunion.

This was followed by a response
by Theo. W. Brazeau. Mr. Brazeau
was one of the youngest "old settlers"
present and he spoke from the standpoint of one born and raised in this community.

Mrs. I. P. Witter then rendered a piano selection in a most charming
manner, which was followed by a response by Mrs. George R. Gardner,
which told somewhat of the early life
in this section and briefly mentioned
the enormous steps that have been
toward a perfect civilization.

Mrs. J. D. Witter also responded
with a paper appropriate to the occasion, reviewing the past history of the town and the life of those present and
bringing it down to the present time.
A. L. Fontaine read a communication from J. L. Coley in which the gentleman told of an incident of the early life in Grand Rapids, when civilization and law and order were looked forward to rather than realized.

Mrs. O. Denis responded with a well
worded talk that was listened to with pleasure by those present, after which
the program was closed by a selection
from the mandolin club.

After the conclusion of the program
officers were elected for the ensuing
year with the following result:

President—Geo. W. Baker.

Vice President—Mrs. O. Denis.

Secretary and Treasurer—T. J.
Cooper.

Supper was served at the Twentieth Century Place after which dancing
was indulged in to the inspiring
strains of Colcord's orchestra until 12
o'clock.

Much might be said concerning and
in favor of these old settlers' reunions,
their tendency toward a promotion of
good fellowship and as an instructive
feature to the rising generation, whose attendance, it would seem, should
rather be encouraged than otherwise,
but lack of time prevents it now. Let us hope, however, that the old settlers
will continue to meet in our city for
many years to come, and the Tribune
would suggest that the younger element turn in another year and volunteer to take the details off the shoulders
of the older ones and give them a
time that will make them realize that they are not standing alone in love
and reverence for their city and county.

Death of Joseph Dugas.

Joseph Dugas, one of the old residents of this section, died on Wednesday from the effects of a dose of medicine taken by mistake. Mr. Dugas
had been more or less ill for some time and had been taking a patent medicine for his ailment and during
the afternoon of Wednesday had gone
to the pantry and taken a dose of what
he supposed to be his regular medicine. Some time afterward he began to feel quite ill, however, and it was found on investigation that he had
picked up the wrong bottle and swallowed a quantity of liniment containing acetone. A physician was at once summoned but the poison had become
so thoroughly circulated through the
system that nothing could be done
and he died that evening.

The deceased had lived here for fifty years past and was 78 years old at the time of his demise. Besides a wife
he leaves four children, they being
Joseph L. Dugas, Mrs. John Love of
Sioux City, Ia., Miss Emma Dugas of
Marquette and Moses Z. Dugas. All
of the children have arrived in the city, excepting Moses, to attend the funeral, which occurs this (Saturday)
morning from the Catholic church.

NOT HER HUSBAND'S BODY

Mrs. Nellie Duffield Views Corpse
at Fond du Lac.

DUFFIELD IS MISSING.

Mau Who Died in Jail Gave Name of Daniels When He Was Arrested.

Fond du Lac, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—Mrs. J. C. Duffield came here this afternoon from Ponderosa, where she resides, to view the remains of the man who died in the county jail Sunday night from the excessive use of opium. She stated, upon seeing the body, that there was a strong resemblance between her husband and the dead man, but that was all. The identity of the man is still a mystery. He gave his name as Daniels when arrested. Mrs. Duffield will return to Ponderosa tonight.

Ponderosa, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—It has just become known that J. C. Duffield has disappeared again. Mrs. Duffield, who was Miss Nellie Taylor at this place before her marriage, received word from Fond du Lac today that a man, supposed to be her husband, had dropped dead in the jail at that place. It was said that he was suffering from the opium habit, which caused his death. Mrs. Duffield went to Fond du Lac this morning to view the body.

J. C. Duffield was the son of a Mr. Duffield of Galveston, Tex., who spent his summers in Waukegan. It was while he was in this vicinity that the son met Miss Caldwell and married her. Shortly after the marriage it was discovered that he was an opium and opium user. His condition became so that it was found necessary to place him in an insane asylum at Milwaukee, from which he escaped. Later he was caught and was taken back to the hospital. He was paroled last summer and he and his wife went South. They returned in a few weeks and then he disappeared and Mrs. Duffield has received no word from him up to the present time.

Word was received late this afternoon that the body at Fond du Lac was not that of Duffield.

ROCKEFELLER'S HARBOR

He Buys a Harbor in Northern Wisconsin from Which to Ship
His Ore.

West Superior, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—The report that John D. Rockefeller has purchased a big tract of land with a harbor in northern Wisconsin is true as far as the harbor is concerned. The land is located at the mouth of the Montreal river, the dividing line between Michigan and Wisconsin at the northern end of the state. There is said to be a very fine harbor there, but no settlement of any kind as yet. The harbor is a good one, but there may be some trouble from the fact that it has a sandstone bottom. It is eighteen feet in depth nearly all the way around and the drop-off from the shore is said to be a steep one so that for boats drawing less than eighteen feet it would be good, but it is claimed that a great deal of trouble would be experienced in getting the depth any greater from the fact that the sandstone exists. Rockefeller has purchased the harbor for the reason that it is but twenty miles from the globe range, and he already has a railroad line surveyed from the range to the harbor. The report has it that $1,000,000 was paid for the property, but this cannot be confirmed.

Campbell was in the main street of Seymour and attempted to steal a horse. The horse became frightened at the traffic efforts of the driver to cause the speed, and shying to one side, tipped the buggy, and threw out the thief, injuring him so that the officers had no difficulty in making the capture.

His second accident happened near Oconto while he was on an expedition against illegal duck hunters. As in the first case he was rescued by the men whom he wanted to arrest. The story was kept a secret by the game warden until today, when it was told him by some Oconto hunters. In company with an Oconto deputy sheriff, Game Warden Bissinger was pursuing the hunters, when both the officers fell through the ice. They struggled in the bay water for several minutes and were nearly exhausted when rescued by the hunters. Out of gratitude to his rescuers Game Warden Bissinger did not make any arrests.

RAIDS KENOSHA HOMES.

Burglar Robs Three Residences and Makes His Escape.

SECURES MUCH BOOTY.

Meets People at Each Place but Accomplishes His Work and Leaves.

Kenosha, Wis., April 8.—[Special.]—

One lone highwayman dropped in on Kenosha Saturday evening and, as a result of four hours' work, he managed to burglarize three houses and to get away with booty variously valued from $200 to $500. Incidental to the robbery the highwayman attempted to kill Clarence E. Heimer and, after having a pleasant chat with Al. Head, whose house he had burglarized, pushed the alderman to one side and escaped. The police have an excellent description of the man, but as yet they have not been able to find any clue to his identity. The man broke into the houses of George D. Head, C. E. Heimer and Mrs. Mary Burke, all on Congress street, and at every place he was seen by inmates of the house.

The robber went to the home of Al. Head shortly after 8 o'clock in the evening. Mr. Head and his wife were sitting together in the library at the time. With great daring and under the blaze of an electric light the burglar scaled the porch in front of the Head residence and gained an entrance to the rooms on the second floor of the house. Once in the house he seemed to have little fear of detection and when he left he carried away everything of value which he desired. Finding the owner of the house at home he refrained from making an excursion to the lower floor of the house. As the man left the house he was met by Mr. Head who questioned him as to his conduct. The robber was not in the least put out by this interruption, but passed the matter off quickly and took to his heels fleeing south on Congress street. Al. Head pursued for a short distance, but the youth of the robber enabled him to get away.

The police were notified, and, while they were searching for the man, he made his way to the home of Mrs. Mary Burke on South Congress street and, peering open a window with a "jimmy," he proceeded to go through the house. Every room was searched and as a reward for his trouble the man carried away jewelry, diamonds and silver valued at several hundreds of dollars. When the work in the house was about completed the son of Mrs. Burke came home and, as he opened the gate, the lone robber took a hint and left the house, rushing past the boy as he entered. Young Burke was too terrified to follow the running man and the fellow escaped a second time for the evening.

The next work was at the home of C. E. Heimer, secretary of the Pettit Malt company. Mr. Heimer and his wife had left the house for the evening and when they returned shortly after 10 o'clock they noticed that there was a light in the front window. Mr. Heimer ran up the steps of the house. As he approached the door he saw a man pull down the curtain. One of the windows was opened and Mr. Heimer entered his home in this manner. As he reached the front hall he was accosted by the burglar. Heimer drew back and demanded of the man what he was doing in the house. The burglar was perfectly composed and told Heimer to get out of the way or he would shoot him. Heimer declared that he would shoot the burglar and the burglar pulled his revolver from his pocket. As Mr. Heimer was unarmed he jumped behind a door and in the melee that followed the light was extinguished and the burglar managed to make his escape through the rear door.

Mr. Heimer at once reported the case to the police and this morning he states that his loss will be small, as the burglar managed to secure only a pin belonging to Mrs. Heimer, which was valued at about $50.

Kenosha, Wis., April 8.—[Special.]—A gang of burglars and highwaymen visited this city. The home of Frederick Rickman was entered and the entire house ransacked, even carpets being torn up in search of money. Louis Anderson, a business man, was held up and had a desperate fight. He lost his overcoat and had before he got free from the robbers. A number of other persons were attacked by highwaymen.

HIS HOUSE IS BURNED.

Mysterious Fire in Home of Young Man Acquitted of Manslaughter.

Green Bay, Wis., April 8.—[Special.]—The house and barn near the northern limits of this city, owned by the family of Young David Vincent, who was acquitted last week on a charge of killing Joseph Otto, were totally destroyed by fire early Sunday morning.

The origin of the fire is a mystery, but presumably it was the result of incendiarism. The fire is seriously regarded here as a sequel of the acquittal of young Vincent.

If every one in the world were healthy and happy what a glad day Easter would be. But the sun rises every Easter morning on a multitude of sick and afflicted. The Easter lilies gladden the hearts of the sick and well alike.

But to the sick something more than the Easter lily is necessary to bring that hope and cheer which every one expects on Easter day. The well need no physician, but the sick need a remedy.

Nearly one-half the people in the United States are suffering from some form or phase of catarrhal ailment. These ailments take different forms at different seasons of the year. In the springtime catarrh assumes a systemic form, producing nervousness, lassitude and general languor.

Systemic catarrh deranges the digestion and through deranged digestion it impoverishes or contaminates the blood. Thus we have blood diseases and nervous derangements through systemic catarrh.

Peruna is a specific for these cases. No other remedy yet devised by the medical profession is able to successfully meet so many phases of spring ailments as Peruna.

Men and women everywhere are praising Peruna as follows:

AN AMERICAN CAREER.

How Charles R. Flint Laid the Foundation for His Millions.

In 1857, in the graduating class of the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute was a youth of 17, named Charles R. Flint. He was a writer in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. He was born in Maine, but raised in the City of Churches. At that time he had earned an enviable reputation for indomitable application and enormous power for work. He was not a brilliant scholar or speaker, but in the fifteen literary clubs composed of the brightest students of the institute, he was regarded as one of its ablest members.

After graduation he entered into commercial life and became first a clerk and then a junior partner in a small shipping house known as William R. Grace & Co. The firm had an unpretentious office in downtown New York, and was insignificant compared with the other and larger houses of the neighborhood. Yet through the genius of its members, and especially of Flint, it was destined to become a great financial power and its members to be multi-millionaires. The young man applied to business the same principles that had made him successful in the institute. Within ten years he was a wealthy man. At 30 he was worth more than a million; today he is ranked among the great capitalists of the world.

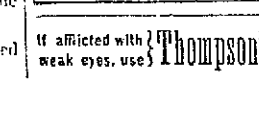

Education and Production.
Massachusetts spent in 1898 $3,812,261,234 upon her high schools. That "Massachusetts" spent one of the 2,000,000 citizens of Massachusetts—men, women and infants—has a productive capacity of $29.9 a year, against $17.0 a year for the average inhabitant of the whole United States and $11.9 a year for the average inhabitant of Tennessee. This means that the people of Massachusetts earned in that year $252,677,149 more than the same number of average people of the United States and $109,699,221 more than the same number of people in Tennessee. Twelve million dollars invested in superior education yield $400,000,000 a year—World's Work.

Alcohol in Cakes.
A London newspaper says that alcohol is now being rendered into an industrial product with which we are quite unfamiliar. Mixed with nitro-cellulose, such as collodion, and evaporated, the product assumes a jelly-like consistency which hardens on exposure. Out into cubes, or pressed into ornamental shapes and percolated with the substance is obtained a considerable volume as a heating agent for drawing room purposes. It burns with a most powerful heat, and leaves neither ash nor discoloration, and mixed with benzol it is being utilized for candles.

Argon and Its Companions.
Since the discovery of that new constituent of the atmosphere, argon, a few years ago, four other previously unknown gases have been found, and Prof. Ramsay recently gave an account of their properties before the Royal Society, says the Youth's Companion. They are helium, neon, krypton and xenon. Of these xenon is the heaviest and helium the lightest. In the vacuum tube they are very beautiful, neon being extremely brilliant and of an orange-pink hue, while krypton is pale violet and xenon sky-blue.

State Flowers.
The state flower of Louisiana is the magnolia, of Missouri the goldenrod, and of Iowa the wild rose. The Arkansas Legislature has decided upon the apple blossom as the state flower.

Housecleaning Time.

This is the time of year when every family man wishes that he had considered the matter more seriously before he decided to actively engage in the raising of a family. He may be a loving father, an indulgent husband, a patriotic citizen, and all the other good things that we say about a fellow when he shudders at this mortal coil and hies himself to that bourne from which no traveler returns, and still, in spite of all these exemplary qualities the chances are dollars to doughnuts that he thinks it is time to quit when housecleaning commences.

About the only consolation a married man finds in a cold, backward spring is that it is delaying housecleaning just that much. He knows that it is just as bound to come as death, measles, taxes and other disagreeable things, but still he welcomes every cold day and seems to hope that some revulsion of nature will cause a step in the usual proceedings that invariably overtake every well-regulated household. While the woman of the house can hardly keep her hands from the tacks in the carpet, if the spring is at all backward, the man, that most terrible being of all the animal kingdom, hopes against hope for the respite that never comes, and as the time draws nearer and nearer, his nerves become drawn so tense that he starts at every sound like a hunted murderer and views the absence of a single chair from its accustomed place with suspicion.

Maybe he has at last made himself think that he is going to escape the ordeal, when, some bright sun shiny morning he is awakened rudely from his warm couch to the realization that the calamity is upon him. He knows what is coming but still he may hope that it won't be as bad as he has been picturing it, only to find perforce that it is worse. How valiantly he starts at taking down stove pipes, pipes that he struggled with only a few short months before to get into place, at which time he probably shocked his whole family by the language he used while trying to jam a six inch pipe into a five inch hole. Now they stick as if they had grown together and the misguided individual on the chair imagines he can carry out the whole outfit by one end, but alas, he finds he was mistaken, and the reproachful looks of his better half haunt him during the time he is at the office trying to brush the dirt from his clothes and get himself into presentable shape. A cold dinner eaten almost any old place in the house and made up of a very questionable lot of grub, does not improve matters, and the smell of soap suds and paste and paint other obnoxious things all contribute their mite toward the general mix up.

There are many different ways of cleaning house, none of them are good ways, but none are not so bad as others. Some women clean house on installment plan while others start the bill rolling by ripping the entire inwards out of a house, so as to make all the other inmates as miserable as possible, then the lady of the house assumes a severe look and goes about with her most forlorn dress on and with her hair awry and apparently enjoys the trouble she has wrought with a morose, tragic and at times sorrowful manner that will always be a mystery to man.

So it goes and it generally lasts about a week and when at last the householder has given up all hope of any improvement he returns some evening to find everything back in its proper place and he sinks back to rest with a sigh of relief, and probably, if of a forgiving nature, condescends to even smile once or twice during the evening. He knows it will come again but makes the best of it and thinks about more pleasant things.

Our sister city will soon have a new lodge of Elks, Mr. Carey having circulated an application blank there and it bears the signatures of 42 of its business men. The lodge will probably be instituted in a week or two, and the officers of Stevens Point Lodge, No. 641, will do the work. Visitors will be present from Marshfield, Wausau, Stevens Point and other places, and the brethren at Grand Rapids will give them a good time. A new lodge will also soon be instituted at Merrill.

Additional Local.

An item floating around the country credited up to "Ex." very truthfully says: "We feel sorry for the man who does not read his home paper. It is no better than a man without a country. He is like a homeless cow that has no regular pasture but grazes around promiscuously on weeds and thistles. No matter what paper he may read, the solid straight-forward citizen insists upon having his home paper."

"Are you prepared for death?" the clergyman asked as he took the sick woman's hand in his own. A shade of patient thought crossed the invalid's face and she said, "She didn't hardly believe she was; there was a little bedroom carpet to be taken up yet, and the paint upstairs had hardly been touched, and she did want to put up new curtains in the dining room, but if she didn't die until next Monday she would be about as near ready as a woman with a big family and no girl, ever expected to be."

On Monday John Flanagan, the Canadian government land agent, left for Alberta, Canada, with a colony of about forty people, who were going to take up homesteads in the new country. The Canadian government offers homestead rights to settlers that there are thousands of square miles that are not taken up. One of Mr. Flanagan's arguments in favor of the new country is that there is very little timber to obstruct the clearing of land, but it would seem as though this point would not carry much weight with a class of men who have found the wood on their land one of the chief mainstays while building themselves a home.

L. Finch of New Rome was in the city on Monday getting facts and figures relative to the newspaper business. The railroad fight over in Adams county has brought about a peculiar state of affairs. The two newspapers in Friendship have seen fit to side with the railroad company on the bond issue matter and the opponents of the measure claim that the editors have refused to publish any communications that in any way oppose the interests of those who desire the issuance of the bonds. In view of this state of affairs they propose to establish a newspaper in which they can voice their sentiments and thus air their side of the question. As Friendship is but a small place it is evident that somebody will be in on a losing proposition provided the other paper is established.

This little yarn which has been published by not a few of the state papers which come to our table tells its own tale. A Nebraska minister, to test the effect of prosperous times upon his congregation asked, "All in the house who pay their debts, stand up." Instantly every man, woman and child with one exception, rose to their feet. He seated the crowd and said, "Let every man who is not paying his debts stand up." The exception noted—a careworn, hungry individual, clothed in his last summer's suit, slowly assumed a perpendicular position, and leaned upon the back of the seat in front of him. "How is it, my friend," inquired the minister, "that you are the only one in this congregation who is unable to meet his obligations?" "I publish a newspaper," he meekly replied, "and my brethren here who just stood up are my subscribers, and—'Let us pray!'" exclaimed the minister.—Rx.

We call attention to the advertisement in this issue of Mr. H. P. Hamilton, Two Rivers, Wis., who desires to purchase all kinds of Indian relics of copper and stone, such as axes, knives, arrows, spears, pipes, etc. All pieces of copper are especially desirable. Almost every farmer finds such articles on his land during the spring and fall work, and sometimes valuable pieces are discovered. Persons who have anything of this kind, should write to Mr. Hamilton and state what they have, at the same time sending a rough tracing of each relic, made by laying the articles on a sheet of paper and running a pencil around the edge. All such letters will be promptly answered and a value put on the relics. Copper relics should be just as they are when found, as it destroys their value to clean them or to scrape off the green coating. Mr. Hamilton has a large collection of Wisconsin relics and is continually adding to it.

The New Northern Wisconsin.

Not so many years ago Northern Wisconsin was only known as a vast lumber camp. In this region the chop- pers and sawyers of the day rapidly turned the tall pine into building material. Then came the development of the mining industry and as time sped on manufacturers and farmers turned their eyes to the New North. They saw many opportunities for getting rich with the aid of the fine soil, the varieties of trees, iron ore, clay, kaolin and marl and now the busy hum of machinery in the shop and the work of the reaper on the farm plainly indicates prosperity. Although this country is rapidly settling, there are still plenty of opportunities, as land is cheap and can be purchased on easy terms. Transportation facilities are of the very best for

Wasp Stings are Fatal.

In an article on the stings of wasps a British medical journal cites the following cases which have come under its notice: A strong, healthy girl of 27 was stung on the neck by a wasp and fainted. On regaining consciousness she complained of a general feeling of numbness and partial blindness, and vomited; she suffered severe abdominal pain. She recovered in the course of a few hours. Two months later she was stung again, this time on the hand. Her face became flushed, she again complained of numbness and blindness, suddenly, became very pale, fainted and died 25 minutes after she was stung.

Another case was that of a girl of 22 years who was stung by a wasp behind the angle of the jaw. The sting was at once extracted and ammonia applied. In a few minutes she complained of faintness and would have fallen if she had not been supported. Her face assumed an expression of great anxiety and a few minutes later was tossing on the bed, complaining of a horrible feeling of choking and of agonizing pain in the chest and abdomen. Brandy gave no relief. There was nausea, but no vomiting. She rapidly became insensible and died 15 minutes after receiving the sting. The most probable explanation of such cases seems to lie in what is known as idiosyncrasy—that is, abnormal sensitivity in particular individuals to certain toxic agents. It is well known that drugs vary much in action on different people. What is a safe dose for one is dangerously large for another. The inability of some people to eat strawberries or shellfish is another instance of the same phenomena. The active agent of bee stings is generally believed to be formic acid. It, therefore, seems very desirable that we should have more accurate information regarding the action of this drug on different species of the lower animals and through them on man himself.

To the Honorable, the Mayor and Common Council of the city of Grand Rapids, Wood county, Wisconsin: Gentlemen: We the undersigned, street committee beg leave to report as follows:

That pursuant to a resolution of the common council of said city authorizing and directing us to cause diagrams of the plans of sewerage for the several districts of said city to be prepared showing the lots and parcels of land, main sewers, minor sewers, man holes, catch basins, and all other matters pertaining to the system, we employed E. Phillee had completed such diagrams, we caused the same to be filed in the office of the city clerk and pursuant to section 925, sub-division 210, Wisconsin statutes of the year 1898 and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, we caused a notice to be published in the Wood County Reporter, the official paper of the said city, that said diagrams were so on file in the office of the city clerk, for more than four weeks prior to March 27th, A. D. 1901, once in each week for five (5) successive weeks and the last publication of the said notice being within thirty days of said 27th day of March, A. D. 1901. The said 27th day of March, A. D. 1901, being the day set for the hearing by said committee to consider any objections to said plans, that may have been filed and to hear all persons who desired to be heard with reference thereto as provided by said section 925 sub-division 210 of Wisconsin statutes and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

To the Mayor and Common Council of the city of Grand Rapids, Wood County, Wisconsin:

Whereas, the Consolidated Water Power Company intends this season to develop the water-power on the Wisconsin river in said city by the construction of a dam and, whereas, the location of said proposed dam has not yet been definitely settled upon, and whereas, the city of Grand Rapids claims to be the owner of the riparian and flowage rights, a part of and appurtenant to and connected with the lands in said city formerly known as the F. L. Witter lands, and conveyed to said city by Warranty deed from F. L. The city engineer reported the most feasible way of draining the north-west part of the city. Report received and ordered filed.

The city physician made the following report:

To the Honorable the Common Council:

In conformity with the duty imposed upon the health officer, I have the honor to render you my report for the year ending March 31, 1901. The total number of deaths was sixty, twenty-four males and thirty-six females, twenty-two were children under two years of age and were due to intestinal troubles. Diphtheria and typhoid fever caused two deaths each, consumption six, cancer three. The remainder were due to various other causes. The total number of births I am unable to state as very few were reported to this office. The present legislature will probably pass some law regarding the reporting of births by which better results can be obtained hereafter, than under the present law. A comparison of the death rate, birth rate, causes of death number and kinds of diseases, of this year with previous years can not be made as no previous reports have ever been made.

The general health of the city has been good, no epidemics have visited us except the mumps and LaGrippe. Five cases of diphtheria were reported with two deaths, seven cases of scarlet fever with no deaths. These cases were scattered about the city and were prevented from spreading by strict quarantine and thorough disinfection, quite a few cases of typhoid occurred, but only five were reported, the physicians in charge not knowing that it should be reported. Two deaths resulted from it.

The water furnished by water works of the west side is I believe unfit for drinking purposes. No examination of it has been made neither has any disease been traced directly to it, still, as I believe, accounts in great measure for the greater prevalence of typhoid on that side. Some portions of our city are not in good sanitary condition on account of poor drainage. Steps should be taken to improve at least the worst places. A particularly bad place is in rear of Mr. Stahl's residence in the first ward.

The city should have a dumping ground and furnish for a short specified time each spring collectors to gather such garbage as the people have, provided, it is in piles or boxes. The people should be notified when the collectors are to be around so they can have their premises cleaned and the rubbish, etc. ready for the collectors.

The salary of this office should be increased as it is entirely out of proportion to the time and work the office should receive. Yours respectfully, FRANK POMAINVILLE, Health Officer.

Talk has again been started during the past week concerning the sale of the Marshfield road to the Northwestern company. It seems that two men supposed to be in the employ of the Northwestern company have been engaged in taking an inventory of stock, etc. of the Marshfield road which leads outsiders to believe that an option has at least been secured by the Northwestern people. Whether there is any significance in the matter remains to be seen.

Extensive improvements are now in progress on the Methodist church. The entire structure is being raised two feet from the foundation after which enough of an excavation will be made so that the basement can be used for Sunday school purposes. The attendance at the church has also augmented so much that it is probable that a gallery will be built inside to increase the seating capacity. Several other improvements will be made about the edifice during the summer.

A small wreck occurred on the St. Paul road about 11:30 Saturday night. The night freight had come in and was doing some switching and an empty car stood across the Green Bay & Western track. The Green Bay switch engine approached, pushing a couple of cars, and the crew did not see the car on the St. Paul track and the consequence was that it was struck fair in the middle and thrown from the track and badly wrecked. The moving cars did not suffer any damage.

THE JEWELLED TALISMAN OR PURITAN AND CAVALIER BY MRS. CAROLINE ORNE

CHAPTER XVIII.

It was two hours after midnight when Falkland trimmed the lamp, stirred up the fire and sat down before it. He had, as agreed between him and Corke the evening previous, sent Redding, his valet, to the Jew's, and as he had not yet returned he had reason to believe that there had been no remission on the part of his confederate. He looked anxious, pale and haggard, and started at every noise. At last, light and cautious footsteps were heard in the passage. Then came three low knocks at his door.

"It is Corke's signal," said he, rising. Neither of them spoke till Corke had entered and the door was again secured.

"I've been waiting for you, what has seemed to me an age," Falkland then said. "How does the business prosper?"

"Well."

"Redding—is he cured of his curiosity?"

"Yes, and his silence secured, if the cure and the curiosity can be effected by cold steel."

"May I dare venture abroad?"

"Dare you venture abroad?" repeated Corke, in a sneering tone. "Yes, if you wouldn't draw suspicion on yourself."

"But it seems to me that everybody I meet will read the deed I've consented to in my eye."

"You think that sitting mewed up here all day will carry with it an air of innocence? You are mistaken. 'Twill be the reverse of that."

"I wish I hadn't meddled with the matter. The least sound starts me. Not long before you came the noise made by a half-starved rat, as I afterward found it to be, nibbling at some bones Redding left by his plate when he ate his supper, made a cold sweat start to my forehead."

"You thought it was his ghost, I suppose; but as giving bones a second picking was a piece of economy he would have despised when living, you might have been certain he would have taken to it after he was dead."

"I wish I could carry as light a heart in my bosom as you do. Hark! Didn't you hear a noise? There are footsteps on the stairs; they are bringing the body here."

"There you are mistaken. It hasn't been found yet."

"Not found?"

"Of course not. How could it be seen in the dark? Come, it is time that you were abroad, making loud and earnest inquiries for your valet."

"His name would stick in my throat like Macheath's amen."

"Say that you sent him to the Jew to pay a hundred pounds, and haven't seen him since."

"Was the body left there?"

"Where do you mean?"

"In the little dark court you spoke of."

"Yes, and the bond you had the good luck to get hold of in the morning is lying close by. It cannot fail to be seen."

"And suspicion will fall on the Jew?"

"There can be no doubt of it."

"I would that it might be otherwise. He never did me any harm."

"You should have thought of that before. There's no help for it now, unless you feel disposed to shift the burden of the crime on to your own shoulders, or it may be on to mine. But I've a way to manage that, and you won't dare do it."

"I shan't attempt it."

"They proceeded in the direction of the Jew's house. Before it was fairly light the Jew had been left alone with his household. Mizar opened the shop door, when the ground, only a few steps distant, drew his attention. On examination the appearance of the muddy soil showed that some heavy weight had been dragged along near the front of the building, and thence to the entrance of the court to which Corke had alluded. He returned quickly to the shop and made known to his master what he had seen.

As dawn now risen, and as directed by the Jew, took a lamp and followed him and Mizar into the court. By holding the light close to the ground the marks were still traceable. They terminated at the further side of the court, near a pile of rubbish. There was a small pool of blood, near the edge of which lay a piece of folded paper, crumpled and defaced by many a sanguinary stain.

On closer inspection they found that the pile of rubbish had been disturbed, and Mizar, in obedience to the command of his master, commenced removing a portion of it, to see if anything was concealed beneath it. He had made but little progress in his task when he and the others looked round and beheld several men standing at the entrance of the court, one of whom they knew to be a magistrate.

"I arrest all three of you, in the king's name," said he, advancing towards them. "For what reason?"

"You, on a charge of murder, and these, your servants, as accomplices."

"Who accuses me and my innocent servants of so foul a crime?" demanded the Jew.

"And whom does he accuse me of murdering?"

"It is hardly necessary that you should be told that it is Redding, his valet, whom he sent to your last night to discharge a debt of a hundred pounds, for which you held his bond."

"I didn't see Redding last night, nor has the debt been paid."

"What is that you have in your hand, old man?" said one of the constable's assistants.

"I cannot tell. I found it lying on the ground, and I have not yet had opportunity to examine it."

"I will save you the trouble," said the constable, taking it from him and unfolding it, he held it to the light. "It is Gilbert Falkland's," he added, "which he gave you for the hundred pounds."

"That cannot be," replied the Jew.

"It can be, and of itself would be sufficient evidence of your guilt. It is plain that to regain possession of it after it had been paid, urged you to commit the crime."

"The debt hasn't been paid, and, of course, I never gave up the bond."

"See for yourself."

The Jew turned pale as he looked at it, for it was, or appeared to be, the same bond he had said, a bond for a hundred pounds, written by his own hand, and signed by Gilbert Falkland.

The constable's assistants went busily to work; some of them overturning the pile of rubbish, to see if the missing man was buried beneath it. The only thing of consequence that rewarded their search was a piece of velvet, to which was attached some tarnished gold lace, and which the keen eyes of Mizar at once detected to be of the same color and quality as a doublet he had seen worn by Falkland, and which he had probably transferred to his valet.

"Now," said the constable, "all three of you have the privilege of refreshing yourselves with a morning walk towards Newgate."

Just then Edward Elliston made his appearance. After returning home, he had discovered that the scarf belonging to Abi, which he had compelled the ruffian who was pursuing her to give up, and which, for present security, he had folded into a small compass and put into his pocket, was still in his possession.

The Jew looked at him, and emphatically pronounced the name of Abi. Elliston answered only by an expressive look, which the Jew rightly interpreted.

Abi and Abi had parted with many fond regrets, softened by a secret hope that they should ere long meet again. Abi, with the opal clasped in her hand, which Abi could not be persuaded to take from her, as soon as she was alone, threw herself on a pile of cushions. Her thoughts dwelt on Harleigh and on Abi, though most of all, she longed to know why, on Edward Elliston. Sleep stole upon her, in the midst of these her pleasant musings, and the hours which to him, her only relative, and to those who had so faithfully served him and her, were so full of anguish and fear, were to her, for a time, like shadows, brightened now and then with the dawn of a golden dream, but soon lost in utter oblivion.

CHAPTER XIX.

A heavy, lumbering coach, drawn by a pair of sleek, well-conditioned horses, which was moving slowly along one of the fashionable streets of London, seemed to particularly attract the attention of two men, who for some time had been lounging at the corner of an alley by which the street was intersected.

"That's it," said one of them.

"Are you certain?" said the other.

"Yes. Don't you see that the body of the carriage is bottle-green—that the horses are iron-gray, and that there isn't a speck of gilding about carriage or harness? Anybody might know that it belonged to a straight-laced Puritan."

"It is easy enough to tell that, but there's more than one straight-laced Puritan in the city who owns a coach and two horses."

"There—what do you think now?"

This question was elicited by the sight of a young and lovely face which appeared at one of the carriage windows.

"I think you are right," was the answer. "Russet-Cloak's face is one of those which is not easily forgotten."

"You understand your part of the game?"

"I am to be on the ground in season to lend my assistance—that is, if you do your part of the business so that it will be needed."

The other now hastened a few paces forward, so as to be a little in advance of the carriage, which was moving at a snail's pace. The man commenced crossing the street, and when directly in front of the horses, drew a large silk handkerchief from his pocket, which, heedlessly and unwittingly to all appearance, he thrust full into the face of one of the animals, which had the effect to frighten both. They immediately commenced plunging and rearing, so as to become totally unmanageable, and before any of the street passengers had time to interfere, the carriage struck against the curbstone, and was overturned with a heavy crash. At the same moment, the horses, with a sudden bound, freed themselves from the pole of the carriage, and darting madly forward, were almost instantly out of sight.

A strong, resolute-looking countryman, who was the first to reach the broken vehicle, with some difficulty forced open the door. There were two ladies inside, the one of whom the man had called Russet-Cloak, being young and very lovely, and will be recognized as Alice Dale; while the other, whom the countryman, who had succeeded in opening the door, at first sight imagined to be dead, was Mrs. Elliston. This too, was the thought of Alice, who, though much frightened, had, with the exception of a sprained wrist, escaped unharmed. By this time, Clarence Harleigh had come to their assistance, who had seen from the window of a house close at hand what had happened.

"Alice, are you hurt?" were his first words.

He then directed the countryman to assist him in carrying Mrs. Elliston to the house where he had witnessed the disaster.

"Keep close to us, Alice," said Harleigh. "But a man whom he had rebuked for his officiousness had already stepped

in between them, so as to prevent her from complying with his request.

The next moment, the crowd, which the accident had attracted to the spot, had closed round her. Being hemmed in on every side, she could see nothing of Harleigh, so that even if she could have freed herself from the entanglements of the throng, she would have been at a loss where to go.

"Can you tell me, sir," said she, speaking to a decently clad man who stood near her, "where they have carried the lady who was in the carriage with me when it was overturned?"

"I can," said the man who from the first had showed himself so officious, "and with your permission, will, with much pleasure, conduct you to where you will find your friends. Hold fast by my arm, and if these knaves don't choose to fall back and give their betters a free pass, I will give them a lesson in manners which they won't soon forget."

"When I have a mind to take a lesson in manners," said a man whom he rightly pushed aside, "I shan't take it of one of Gil Falkland's lackeys, without giving him one in return;" and to show that he meant as he said, he gave the man a sharp clip across the shoulders with his quarter-staff.

Alarmed at this, and still more at finding that the man who had offered her his aid was in the employ of Falkland, she let go of his arm and endeavored to make her escape.

"I would give you a taste of my rapier," said he, at the same time seizing hold of a portion of Alice's dress, "were it not that I have this lady under my protection."

"Release me—I beg that you will," said Alice, in violent agitation.

"Rapier or no rapier," said he who had dealt the blow, "as you seem to have undertaken to protect the lady against her will, you shall have further proof of the virtue of this oaken cudgel, if you don't let her go."

The earnest and elevated tone of voice in which this was said, as well as the words themselves, served to indicate to Harleigh the place where Alice was to be found. The exclamation of joy uttered by Alice at Harleigh's appearance would of itself have showed her sturdy defender that she had no reason to distrust him as a protector. He now showed his good will by proceeding Harleigh and Alice, and rendering their egress from the crowd less onerous.

"You have my thanks, good friend," said Harleigh, "for your voluntary service. It appears to me that your looks and voice are familiar to me."

"Likely enough, for you have seen me once, I am certain."

"So am I, but when and where, I've no recollection."

"Don't you remember that the king graciously admitted me to his presence, at Whitehall, not many weeks ago?"

"Yes, yes—I remember it well," said Harleigh, with some diffidently repressing a smile, as he recalled to mind Hendrick Dykes and the carefully preserved curri-comb.

"Why, if I'd been a prince," said Hendrick, with greatunction, "the king couldn't have treated me better. Margery wouldn't exchange the silk gown he ordered to be sent her for a queen's crown. He stole right into our hearts, and will keep there as long as we live."

They had by this time reached the steps of Mrs. Selwyn's door, where stood the countryman who had assisted Harleigh in removing Mrs. Elliston from the broken carriage and carrying her into the house. He proved to be a friend of Hendrick's, who had come to the city in company with him and his wife Margery. Having a second time received the cordial thanks of Harleigh, to which were added those of Alice, they took leave, equally pleased with themselves and with those who had shown themselves so ready to appreciate their services.

A surgeon and Edward Elliston, who were immediately sent for, had now arrived. On examining the patient, it was found that the skull was so badly fractured it was necessary that a portion of it should be removed. All thoughts of her being carried to her own home were, therefore, for the present abandoned. By the time the operation was over, which was successfully performed, Alice found that her wrist, which she had imagined to be only slightly sprained, was much swollen and began to be excessively painful. This would render it impossible for her to bestow on Mrs. Elliston those numerous little attentions which she otherwise would have done, although a reliable and experienced nurse had been promptly sent for by Edward.

"I will supply your place, dear Alice, as far as I can," said Abi. "It will prevent my thoughts from dwelling so constantly on him whom I am not allowed to minister to."

Thus, by a combination of painful circumstances, Harleigh and Alice, Mrs. Elliston and Abi were brought together under the same roof. The promise made to Mr. Walworth by Harleigh was a second time unintentionally broken, while Mrs. Elliston, still in a state of insensibility, was waited on and watched over with the tenderest care by her to whom, in the hour of deep affliction, she had refused her aid and sympathy.

CHAPTER XX.

The next session of the Old Bailey having been close at hand, at the time of the Jew's arrest, the day for his arraignment soon arrived. The strict search which had been made for the body of the valet had proved unsuccessful, a circumstance which, in the minds of many, told against the prisoner, as it was generally thought that he could, if he had been so minded, point out the place of his concealment.

Early in the day crowds of people, consisting of almost every degree, were seen hastening to the place of trial. A host of witnesses had been summoned in behalf of the prosecution, while there were none, except Clarence Harleigh and Edward Elliston, Abi and Abi, who had anything to testify which would be favorable to the prisoner. A few witnesses for the prosecution remained to be examined, when a billet was put into Harleigh's hand.

"If you are a friend to Jonathan, the Jew," it said, "come without delay to the house directly opposite where he used to live."

Harleigh, having with some difficulty worked his way through the crowd, hastened to the house designated. Before he had time to knock the door was opened by a middle-aged woman.

"Follow me," said she, and she led the way up a dark, narrow staircase. At its termination, she opened a door. "Enter," said she, and then, without another word, withdrew.

He obeyed, and found himself in a comfortable looking bed chamber, where, seated in a deep, stuffed chair, was a young man, so thin and pale, that his appearance was almost ghastly.

"You don't recognize me?" said he.

"I do not," was Harleigh's answer.

"There are those who will know me, and who would rather meet a famished wolf in their path than to see me. I am, or was, Gilbert Falkland's valet."

"Do you mean him supposed to have been murdered?"

"I am he."

"This is indeed strange and unlooked for. Judging by your pale looks, and the deep scar on your forehead, you have been near death's door."

"Within a single step, as I am told by these two whose care I fell."

WAVE SAVED THE VESSELS.

It Interposed Between Two Ships in Time to Prevent a Collision.

Captain Birch, of the British ship Cawdor, from Newcastle, N. S. W., tells of a narrow escape his vessel had from colliding near the Australian coast with the schooner Golden Shore. A hurricane was raging when the ships nearly came together, and a big wave which came along at the opportune moment averted a disaster. The Golden Shore is owned in San Francisco and was lumber laden.

The Cawdor was in ballast and a gale arose. In a few hours his fury became terrible. Captain Birch soon realized the folly of sailing in such a sea, and every yard of canvas was stripped from the masts. There was nothing to do but drift, and this the ship did for some time. Soon the bare masts of the schooner Golden Shore were in sight, she also drifting rapidly in the storm.

As the ships neared one another their positions became perilous. The terrified crews were unable to control them and looked for nothing but the sinking of one or both of the vessels. The Cawdor bore straight down toward the big schooner with a force that meant destruction.

But a few seconds more and the vessels would have crashed together and not something occurred that filled the sailors with wonder. A great wave, as if conscience-stricken, rose between the craft and turned the nose of the Cawdor just enough to prevent the crash that seemed unavoidable. She just missed the Golden Shore. So close were the vessels as the ship fled broadcast by the schooner that one could have jumped from the Cawdor to the Golden Shore, Captain Birch says.

When the vessels slipped by one another a cheer went up from 100 voices. The Golden Shore drifted on, but in the distance it was seen that she had turned completely around. The Cawdor was uninjured.—San Francisco Call.

DANIEL O'CONNELL'S FEES.

Irish Lawyers of His Time Made Good Income.

The trustees of the National Library of Ireland have just purchased the fee-book of Daniel O'Connell. This little volume, in its hundred pages, or so of parallel columns, laboriously prepared by the hands of the liberator himself, shows in pounds, shillings and pence his early struggles. O'Connell was called to the Irish bar in 1795—the year of the rebellion—and seven days later he got his first brief—from a brother-in-law—who retained him to draft a declaration on a promissory note. The only other business he got that year was also given to him by a kinsman—a cousin—and it was of the same kind. The fee on each occasion was £1 2s 9d. It was in one of his earliest cases that O'Connell made the retort that attracted attention to him, says the London Chronicle. He was cross-examining an awkward witness, who declared that he had drunk nothing but his share of a pint of whisky. "On your oath, now," thundered the young counsel, "was not your share all but the pewter?"

O'Connell's fee-book is an interesting record of his rapid rise in the profession. For the first year, as we have seen, his income amounted to only £2 5s 6d. Next year he earned over £50, and the year after he made over £100. According to memoranda made in his own handwriting his income in 1803 was £495, and in the following years, £775, £840, £1,077, £1,173, £2,148, £2,736, £2,951, £3,047, and £3,808, respectively. This record throws much light on the incomes at the Irish bar nearly 100 years ago, for in 1812, when O'Connell was making nearly £4,000 a year, he was still quite a young man.

Cossacks Are Remorseless Soldiers.

The Russian authorities have always been aware of the usefulness of their Cossack soldiery in quelling outbreaks even in European Russia. Forty years ago these wild soldiers of the steppes were sent to quell the insurrection in Poland. The horrible butchery which then ensued in Warsaw and other Polish towns forms one of the blackest pages in the history of Russia. Only eighteen months ago the Cossacks were let loose in the streets of St. Petersburg to restore order among the disaffected students of the university. Riding straight into the hands of students, the Cossacks lashed right and left with their long cruel reins, loaded with lead, and the students were literally driven into submission.

Percentage of World's Population.

The population of the whole world is about 1,500,000,000. Of this Great Britain and her colonies has 25.9 per cent; Russia, 8.0 per cent; France, 6.3 per cent; United States, 5.7 per cent; Germany, 4.6 per cent; Austro-Hungary, 3.1 per cent; Italy, 2.2 per cent.

The dangerous work of coal-mining is almost a third as fatal as the battlefield, for of every 1,000 miners, 232 are killed every year in the performance of their work.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Senate.

Gov. La Follette on the evening of the 3d returned to the Legislature five bills to which he refuses to affix his signature. One of the bills vetoed is that of Assemblyman Owen, known as 413 A., giving the boards of juvenile and municipal officers of the second and third classes power to remove members of the fire and police departments without trial if "the good of the service" so requires. Another bill is Assemblyman Zinn, which provides for an increase in the salary of $800 to $1,000 for the city veterinarian of Milwaukee. In vetoing Mr. Erickson's bill, No. 371 A., giving Adolphus P. Nelson authority to condemn a dam on Wood river, Burnett county, the governor holds the state should always retain the right to repeal such privileges. The fourth Assembly bill vetoed is No. 132 A., by Mr. Gilman, giving the city of Portland power to erect a toll bridge over the Clatsop river. The Senate bill vetoed was No. 227 S., by Mr. Jacobs, relating to the change of venue from the circuit court and the county court of Dodge county. The governor holds that the bill would modify the existing law on the subject of venue, and that it was unnecessary. The Senate session was short, adjournment being taken at 9 o'clock to allow the members of the committee on privileges and elections to attend the meeting of the committee.

The first move toward fixing the date of the final adjournment of the Legislature was made on the 4th, when Senator Kreutzer introduced a joint resolution providing that all business of the Legislature should be completed by midnight May 1st, and that the Legislature adjourn sine die May 4. The resolution was referred to the committee on rules. The anti-legislative bill was introduced by the Senate without the formality of further discussion, and was 15 to 12. Gov. La Follette's veto of the bill expelling the Milwaukee expulsion from taxation on constitutional grounds was on the Senate calendar, but on motion of the bill author of the bill, the action on it was deferred for a week. The committee on education reported for passage with an amendment to the bill, H. R. 111 S., providing for state aid to graded schools, and an increase in the clerical force of the state superintendent. The following bills were passed: Providing for the cataloging and library distribution of public documents by the free library commission; relative to collection of water rates; and that officers in cities; relating to improvements of Lost Creek. Senator McGillicuddy's bill providing for flags on polling booths, amended so that it shall be optional with the clerk and town board to provide flags, was introduced in Congress and third reading in the Senate. Senator Roeb's bill authorizing the Milwaukee county board to fix the salaries of the sheriff and his deputies, was advanced to engrossment and third reading.

The committee on privileges and elections of the Senate decided to report the Stevens primary election substitute without recommendation. The Senate on the 5th received the report. The committee recommended that the bill be made the special order of business for the evening of the 10th. (Byond recording the reports of the committee on the primary election bill, the Senate did little business.)

A contest in the Senate over the primary election bill was precipitated on the morning of the 5th. It was brought on by a resolution introduced by Senator Gavney, providing for the election of the primary election bill to be reported by the committee on the 10th, not later than this evening. No. 73 S. is the original primary election bill introduced by Senator Miller. Senator Gavney asked inclusion of the bill on the resolution. Senator Miller objected, but Senator Gavney stated that it was a privileged resolution and entitled to immediate consideration. Then Senator Miller made a vigorous appeal to the Senate to vote down the resolution. After discussion the bill was voted on and the resolution passed—18 to 12. Assemblyman Hall's resolution for a constitutional amendment legalizing the use of voting machines in Wisconsin, was lost in the Senate today. There were 12 yeas and 10 nays in its favor, the vote being 12 to 10. Senator McGillicuddy raised the point of order that a majority of the members-elect must be present to pass a constitutional amendment. Senator Stevens moved to lay the point on the table, and the resolution lost. The Woodward marriage bill, prohibiting the union of people afflicted with diplopia, and other diseases, and made so as to make the certificate of the physician a condition, was ordered to engrossment and third reading by the Senate by a vote of 15 to 13. A number of bills were passed, including the following: prohibiting the sale of publications devoted to sedition, crimes, etc.; prohibiting the employment of children under 14 in bowling alleys, beer gardens or barrooms; cutting down the noon closing of schools in state and county buildings; one hour and cutting off the Saturday holiday; constitutional amendment changing the term of the state superintendent to four years, beginning in July, and removing the salary of the superintendent from the salary of the governor; ELKS TO ORGANIZE.

Lodge is a Sure Thing in This City.—
All Preliminaries Arranged.

During the past week a paper was
circulated by Will Carey for the purpose of feeling of the business men to
see if they desired the organization of
a lodge of the Elks in this city and the
rapidity and ease with which the
names were secured showed that there
would be no trouble in securing a sufficient number. About forty representative men were secured in a very
short time without any solicitation
whatsoever, and there is no doubt that
the lodge will be formed in the near future.

The lodge here will have to be organized under the auspices of the Stevens Point lodge, that being the
nearest city to this place that has an organization of this sort. Members
of Marshfield and Wausau lodges have
expressed a willingness and intention
to attend in a body should a lodge be
organized here. The following names
are now on the list to go in as charter
members:

R. E. Goggin J. C. Goggin Samuel Church Chas. F. Kruger Isaac P. Witter Aug. C. Otto John A. Jaeger Theo. A. Taylor Wm. F. Kellogg L. M. Slatterer Ray A. Love A. L. Edgman Wm. J. Conway Guy Dutcher F. J. Wood Albert E. Lichty John E. Daly O. T. Hungen Wm. E. Wachsen Oscar Hathaway Harry Sanderson	D. D. Conway F. L. Stolt Wm. H. Reeves Wm. H. Barnes W. G. Scott Chas. Pomminville W. A. Drum Arthur Miller Alphonse R. Sutor Alex. Muir Otto E. Roenigk Edward J. Whitney Chas. A. Dixon Robt. W. Morse Michael Slatterer Ernest Oberbeck Wm. Scott Guy Sash Chas. F. Kellogg Ed. Kouke Michael Bogger
---	---

On Sunday afternoon at two o'clock
a meeting will be held at the K. P.
hall for the purpose of electing officers
and effecting a temporary organization. The Elks, wherever an organization exists, are always a popular
organization, and there is no doubt
that the lodge in this city will be no
exception to the rule.

Charged with Assault.

Adam Miller was arrested on Wednesday on complaint of John Jadack on a charge of assault with intention to do great bodily harm, and was
placed in the county jail by Deputy Sheriff Warzinski of Marshfield.

Both parties reside at Milladore and
the trouble started from a saloon row,
during which Miller struck Jadack on
the head with an iron poker, inflicting
a severe scalp wound. Jadack and
son then turned in together and
thrashed Miller. Miller had come to
this city to have the Jadacks arrested,
but the latter had been too quick for
him and got out their warrant first.
This is the story told by the different parties. Miller's hearing was set
for the 23rd instant.

Killed at Tomahawk.

A railroad fatality occurred on Saturday morning at Tomahawk through
a collision resulting from an open
switch. Freight train number 96,
south bound, left the rails within the
city of Tomahawk and collided with a
car on another track, which was loaded with pulpwood. Harry Kerr,
brakeman on the freight, was endeavoring to disconnect the air between the cars when the accident occurred to the train. He was thrown
forcibly between the moving cars and
jammed to death. His head was dis-
figured almost beyond recognition.
Kerr's parents reside at Portage.—

Nearly a Blaze.

An alarm of fire on Tuesday afternoon brought out a large crowd and
investigation proved that the sister's
house, which stands in the rear of the Catholic church, was on fire. Those who had collected managed to extinguish the blaze, however, before the engine arrived.

The fire originated from the grass
which had been burned about the
house and worked under the siding
and up between the studding, filling
the house with smoke and making it
appear of a serious nature. A few
dollars will repair the damage caused
by tearing off boards.

Died Suddenly.

Nellie Campbell, the 17 year old daughter of Robert Campbell of Dex-
terville, died very suddenly on Wednesday morning from what the
doctors pronounced heart failure.
The young lady had been in good
spirits and apparently in perfect
health the night before and retired in
this condition and in the morning she
apparently tried to call for help and
expired almost immediately, being
dead when her relatives reached the
bedside.

on the west side, and a large number of invited guests were in attendance.

wedded life.

For Beating His Wife.

Officer Mike Griffin of Marshfield
came down on Thursday having in
charge Al Loucks, who had been
arrested on a charge of wife beating,
and he was placed in the county jail
to await his examination, which will
occur on the 19th inst.

It is claimed that Loucks had been
drinking for some time and had an
altercation with his wife, during
which he struck her several heavy
blows in the face, inflicting a black
eye and other bruises. When the manner in which he had treated his
wife became known the populace was
indignant and there were threats of
giving him a coat of tar and feathers,
and, in fact, had made preparations
to do this when the officers of the law
stepped in and arrested Loucks to
prevent him coming to harm.

Only a few years ago Loucks was a
well-to-do man at Marshfield, being
the proprietor of a well-stocked livery
stable and his downfall has been
brought about by over indulgence in
liquor, and he is still an exemplary citizen when not under the influence of
intoxicants.

High School Notes.

After a week's vacation school was
begun again Monday morning with
very favorable appearances. There
are eight more weeks during which
time much difficult and important
work must be done.

The theory and art class was somewhat surprised Wednesday afternoon by a change in teachers. Mr. Fuller
will instruct the class for the remainder of the year in place of Mr. Blynd.

Mr. Hambrecht has been performing many experiments during the last
few evenings with the electric lantern
and so far has been very successful.

The Juniors are making great preparation for May 3rd and expect to make their Prom the ball of the season.

Next week is examination week
which means much hard work for the
teachers as well as the pupils.

Notice to Contractors.

One more week will be given in which to submit bids on the following. April 13th having been set for the day of opening. Sealed bids will be received up to April 18, at noon for the erection and completion of a brick vener Catholic church, to be erected at Sigel, Wood Co. Wis. First, the complete building; second, different branches of the work; third, heating.
Heating men are to make out specification, specifying what they will furnish, all according to plans and specifications. The plans and specifications can be had at Rev. James Garra's residence, Junction City, Portage Co.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg
with a rusty wire. Inflammation and
blood poisoning set in. For two years
he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but he wrote, I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1-2 boxes of Bucklin's
Arnica salve and my leg was sound
and well as ever." For eruptions, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters

OLD SETTLERS MEET.

Annual Reunion Held at the Opera
Hall Thursday Evening.

The old settlers held their meeting
at the opera house Thursday evening,
but the attendance was not as large
as had been expected by the interest
shown at former meetings of this
kind. After those present had registered, the program was opened by a
selection by the mandolin club. The president, R. E. McFarland, then
made an opening address, touching on
the mission of the meeting and welcoming the old settlers to their annual
reunion.

This was followed by a response
by Theo. W. Brazeau. Mr. Brazeau
was one of the youngest "old settlers"
present and he spoke from the stand-
point of one born and raised in this
community.

Mrs. L. P. Witter then rendered a piano selection in a most charming
manner, which was followed by a
response by Mrs. George R. Gardner,
which told somewhat of the early life
in this section and briefly mentioned
the enormous steps that have been
toward a perfect civilization.

Mrs. J. D. Witter also responded
with a paper appropriate to the occasion, reviewing the past history of the
town and the life of those present and
bringing it down to the present time.

A. L. Fontaine read a communication from J. L. Corey in which that gentleman told of an incident of the early life in Grand Rapids, when civilization and law and order were
looked forward to rather than realized.

Mrs. O. Denis responded with a well
worded talk that was listened to with
pleasure by those present, after which
the program was closed by a selection
from the mandolin club.

After the conclusion of the program
officers were elected for the ensuing
year with the following result:

President—Geo. W. Baker.
Vice President—Mrs. O. Denis.
Secretary and Treasurer—T. J.
Cooper.

Supper was served at the Twentieth Century Place after which dancing
was indulged in to the inspiring
strains of Colcord's orchestra until 12
o'clock.

Much might be said concerning and
in favor of these old settlers' reunions,
their tendency toward a promotion of
good fellowship and as an instructive
feature to the rising generation, whose
attendance, it would seem, should
rather be encouraged than otherwise.
But lack of time prevents it now. Let us hope, however, that the old settlers
will continue to meet in our city for
many years to come, and the Tribune
would suggest that the younger element turn in another year and volunteer to take the details off the shoulders
of the older ones and give them a
time that will make them realize that
they are not standing alone in love
and reverence for their city and country.

Death of Joseph Dugas.

Joseph Dugas, one of the old residents of this section, died on Wednes-
day from the effects of a dose of medicine taken by mistake. Mr. Dugas
had been more or less ill for some time and had been taking a patent
medicine for his ailment and during
the afternoon of Wednesday had gone
to the pantry and taken a dose of what
he supposed to be his regular medicine. Some time afterward he began
to feel quite ill, however, and it was
found on investigation that he had
picked up the wrong bottle and swal-
lowed a quantity of liniment containing acetone. A physician was at once
summoned but the poison had become
so thoroughly circulated through the
system that nothing could be done
and he died that evening.

The deceased had lived here for fifty
years past and was 78 years old at
the time of his demise. Besides a wife
he leaves four children, they being
Joseph L. Dugas, Mrs. John Love of
Sioux City, Ia., Miss Emma Dugas of
Marquette and Moses Z. Dugas. All
of the children have arrived in the
city, excepting Moses, to attend the
funeral, which occurs this (Saturday)
morning from the Catholic church.

NOT HER HUSBAND'S BODY

Mrs. Nellie Duffield Views Corpse at Fond du Lac.

DUFFIELD IS MISSING.

Man Who Died in Jail Gave Name of Daniels When He Was Arrested.

Fond du Lac, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—Mrs. J. C. Duffield came here this afternoon from Pewaukee, where she resides, to view the remains of the man who died at the county jail Sunday night from the excessive use of opium. She stated, upon seeing the body, that there was a strong resemblance between her husband and the dead man, but that was all. The identity of the man is still a mystery. He gave his name as Daniels when arrested. Mrs. Duffield will return to Pewaukee tonight.

Pewaukee, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—It has just become known that J. C. Duffield has disappeared again. Mrs. Duffield, who was Miss Nellie Caldwell of this place before her marriage, received word from Fond du Lac today that a man, supposed to be her husband, had been dropped dead in the jail at that place. It was said that he was suffering from the opium habit, which caused his death. Mrs. Duffield went to Fond du Lac this morning to view the body.

J. C. Duffield is the son of a Mr. Duffield of Galveston, Tex., who spent his summers in Waukegan. It was while he was in this vicinity that the son met Miss Caldwell and married her. Shortly after the marriage it was discovered that he was a morphine and opium user. His condition became so that it was found necessary to place him in an insane asylum. He was committed to the asylum at Milwaukee, from which he escaped. Later he was caught and was taken to the hospital. He was paroled last summer and he and his wife went South. They returned in a few weeks and then he disappeared and Mrs. Duffield has received no word from him up to the present time.

Word was received late this afternoon that the body at Fond du Lac was not that of Duffield.

He Buys a Harbor in Northern Wisconsin from Which to Ship His Ore.

West Superior, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—The report that John D. Rockefeller has purchased a tract of land with a harbor in northern Wisconsin is true as far as the harbor is concerned. The land is located at the mouth of the Montreal river, and is situated at the northern end of the state. There is said to be a very fine harbor there, but no settlement of any kind as yet. The harbor is a good one, but there may be some trouble from the fact that it is a sandstone bottom. It is eighteen feet in depth nearly all the way around and the drop-off from the shore is said to be a steep one so that for boats drawing less than eighteen feet it would be good, but it is believed that a great deal of trouble would be experienced in getting the depth any greater from the fact that the sandstone exists. Rockefeller has purchased the harbor for the reason that it is but twenty miles from the Gribble range, and he already had a railroad line surveyed from the range to the harbor. The report has it that $2,000,000 was paid for the property, but this cannot be confirmed.

RAIDS KENOSHA HOMES.

Burglar Robs Three Residences and Makes His Escape.

SECURES MUCH BOOTY.

Meets People at Each Place but Accomplishes His Work and Leaves.

Kenosha, Wis., April 8.—[Special.]—One lone highwayman dropped in on Kenosha Saturday evening and as a result of four hours' work, he managed to burglarize three houses and to get away with booty variously valued from $300 to $500. Incidental to the robbery the highwayman attempted to kill Clarence E. Remer and, after having a pleasant chat with Al Head, whose house he had burglarized, pushed the alderman to one side and escaped. The police have an excellent description of the man, but as yet they have not been able to find any clue to his identity. The man broke into the houses of George D. Head, C. E. Remer and Mrs. Mary Burke, all on Congress street, and at every place he was seen by inmates of the houses.

The robber went to the home of Al Head shortly after 8 o'clock in the evening. Mr. Head and his wife were sitting together in the library at the time. With great daring and under the blaze of an electric light the burglar scaled the porch in front of the Head residence and entered the entrance to the rooms on the second floor of the house. Once in the house he seemed to have little fear of detection and when he left he carried away everything of value which he desired. Finding the owner of the house at home he refused to make an excursion to the lower floor of the house. As the man left the house he was met by Mr. Head who questioned him as to his conduct. The robber was not in the least put out by this interruption, but passed the matter off quickly and took to his heels fleeing south on Congress street. Al Head pursued for a short distance, but the youth of the robber enabled him to get away.

The police were notified, and, while they were searching for the man, he made his way to the home of Mrs. Mary Burke on South Congress street and prying open a window with a "jimmy" he proceeded to go through the house. Every room was searched and as a reward for his trouble the burglar secured a quantity of jewelry, diamonds and silver valued at several hundreds of dollars. When the work in the house was about completed the son of Mrs. Burke came home and, as he opened the gate, the lone robber took a hint and left the house, rushing past the boy who he entered. Young Burke was too terrified to follow the running man and the fellow escaped a second time for the evening.

The next work was at the home of C. E. Remer, secretary of the Kenosha Electric company. Mr. Remer and his wife had left the house for the evening and when they returned shortly after 10 o'clock they noticed that there was a light in the front window. Mr. Remer ran up the steps of the house. As he approached the door he saw a man put down the curtain. One of the windows was opened and Mr. Remer entered his home in this manner. As he reached the front hall he was accosted by the burglar. Remer drew back and demanded of the man what he was doing in the house. The burglar was perfectly composed and told Remer to get out of the way or he would shoot him. Remer declared that he would shoot the burglar and the burglar pulled his revolver from his pocket and fired a shot. The burglar jumped behind a door and in the melee that followed the light was extinguished and the burglar managed to make his escape through the rear door. Mr. Remer at once reported the case to the police and this morning he states that his loss will be small, as the burglar managed to secure only a pin belonging to Mrs. Remer, which was valued at about $50.

Racine, Wis., April 8.—[Special.]—A gang of burglars and highwaymen raided this city. The home of Frederick Rickman was entered and the entire house ransacked, even carpets being torn up in search of money. Louis Anderson, a business man, was held up and had a desperate fight. He lost his watch and his belt and got free from the robbers. A number of other persons were attacked by highwaymen.

The committee is composed of D. D. Sutherland of Fond du Lac, Rev. H. B. Stetson of Oshkosh, and Dr. C. Flagg of Ripon. HIS HOUSE IS BURNED.

Mysterious Fire in Home of Young Man Acquitted of Man-slaughter.

Green Bay, Wis., April 8.—[Special.]—The house and barn near the northern limits of this city, owned by the family of Young David Vincent, who was acquitted last week on a charge of killing Charles Otto, were totally destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. The origin of the fire is a mystery, but presumably it was the result of incendiarism. The fire is generally regarded here as a sequel of the acquittal of young Vincent. The members of the Vincent family escaped from the burning house in their nightclothes.

WANT ANOTHER ROUTE.

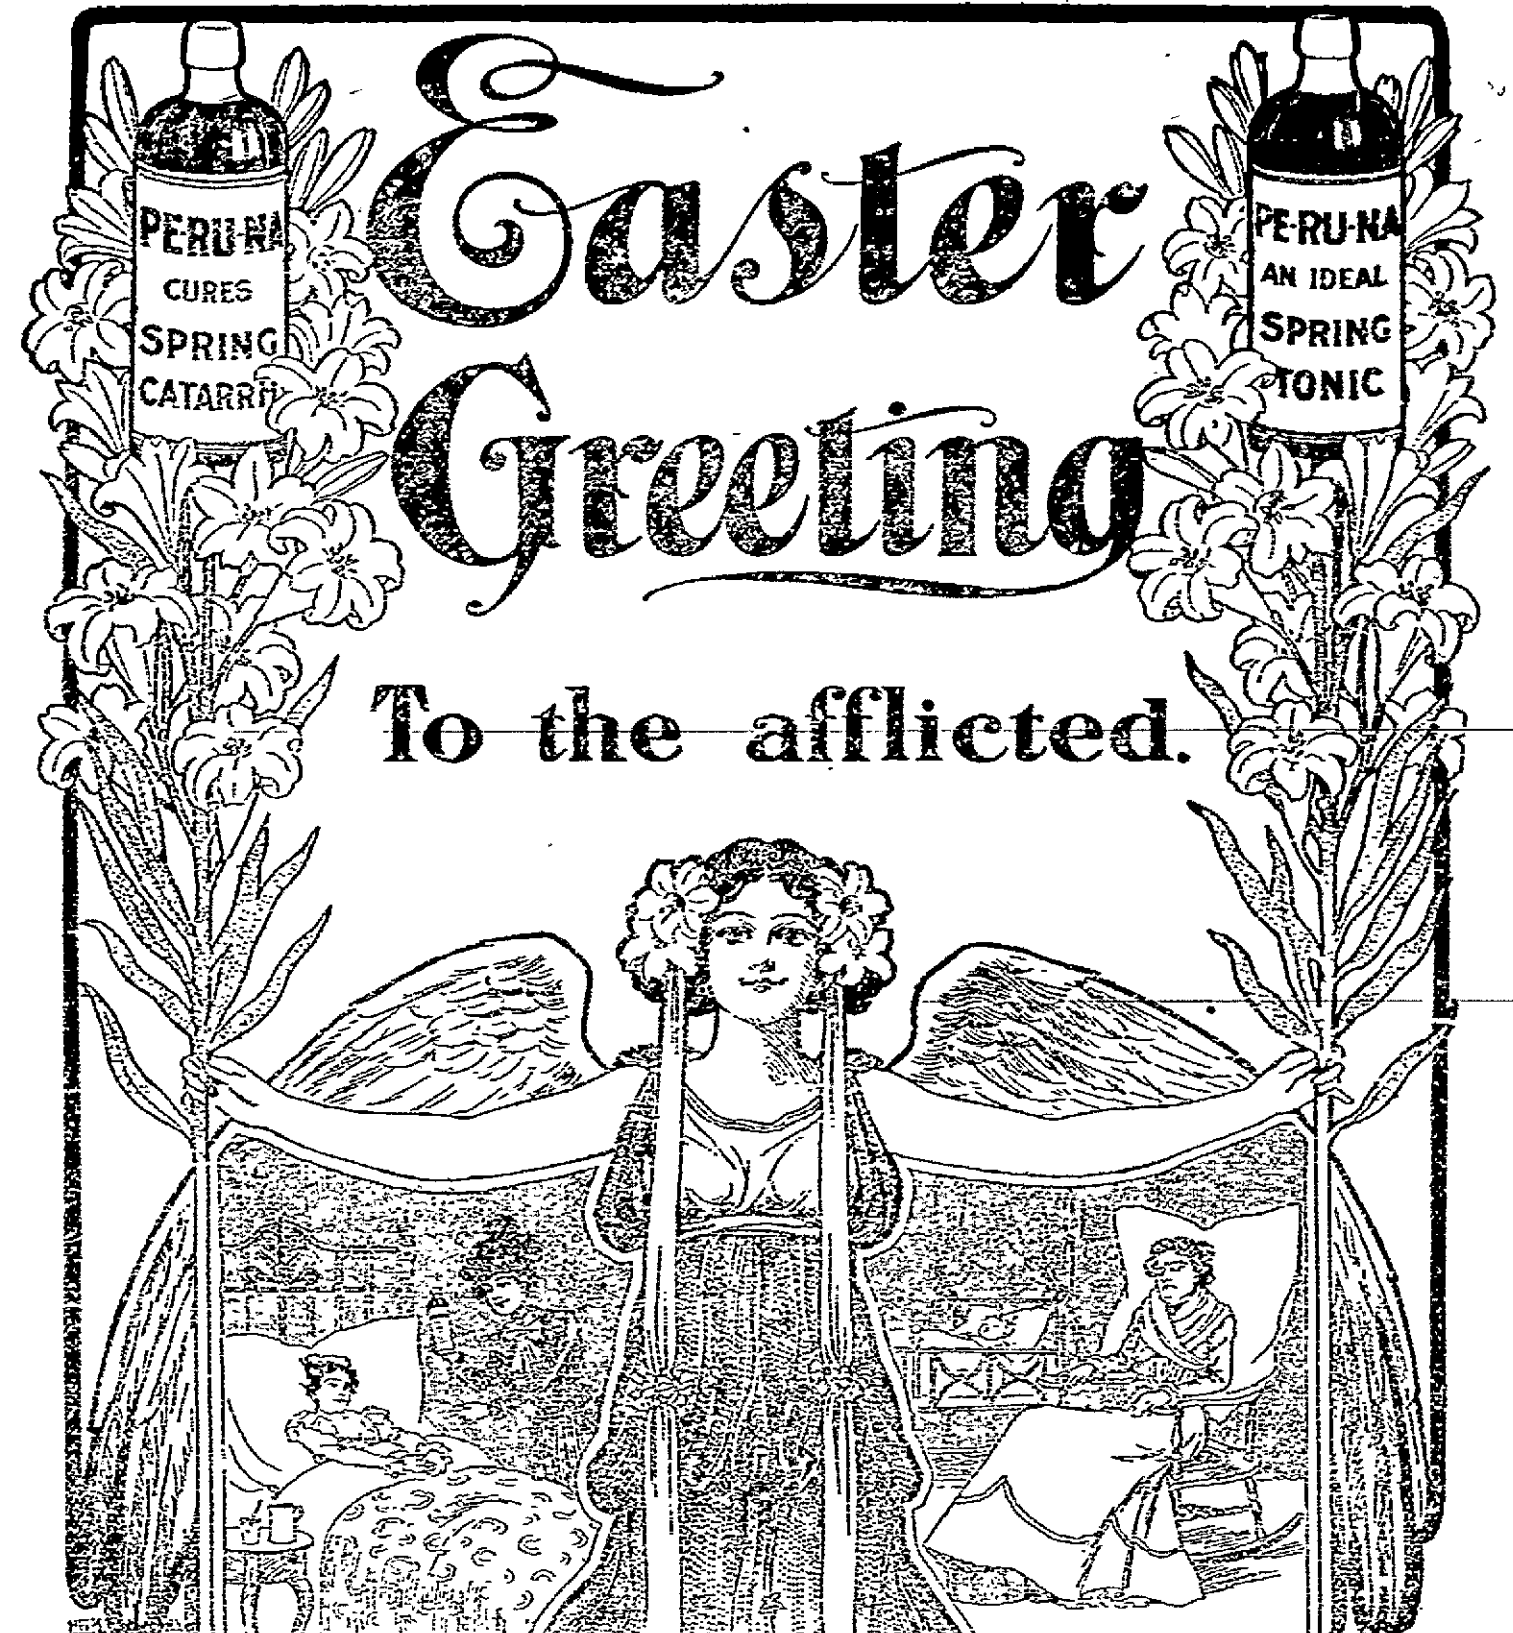

Rural Delivery a Success in Brown County.

Green Bay, Wis., April 8.—[Special.]—Application will soon be made of the postal department for the establishment of a fourth rural mail delivery route in Brown county, starting from Green Bay. The three routes established in this county last summer compare favorably with routes in any other part of the United States in the volume of business handled. An average of 22,000 pieces of mail is handled on the three routes every month.

Easter Greeting

To the afflicted.

If every one in the world were healthy and happy what a glad day Easter would be. But the sun rises every Easter morning on a multitude of sick and afflicted. The Easter lilies gladden the hearts of the sick and well alike.

But to the sick something more than the Easter lily is necessary to bring that hope and cheer which every one expects on Easter day. The well need no physician, but the sick need a remedy.

Nearly one-half the people in the United States are suffering from some form or phase of catarrhal ailment. These ailments take different forms at different seasons of the year. In the springtime catarrh assumes a systemic form, producing nervousness, lassitude and general languor.

Systemic catarrh deranges the digestion and through deranged digestion it impoverishes or contaminates the blood. Thus we have blood diseases and nervous derangements through systemic catarrh.

Peruna is a specific for these cases. No other remedy yet devised by the medical profession is able to successfully meet so many phases of spring ailments as Peruna.

Men and women everywhere are praising Peruna as follows:—

- A First Class Tonic.
Wm. A. Collier, Assistant Paymaster U. S. N., writes: "I have taken Peruna, and recommend it to those needing a first-class tonic."
- A Spring Tonic.
Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, Lynchburg, Va., says: "There is no better spring tonic than Peruna, and I have used about all of them."
- The Best of Tonics.
Hon. W. C. Chambers, Chief Justice of Samoa, says: "I have tried one bottle of Peruna and I can truthfully say it is one of the best tonics I ever used."
- A Grand Tonic.
Mrs. Gridley, mother of Captain Gridley, of the "Olympia," writes: "I used Peruna and can truthfully say it is a grand tonic."
- For Overwork.
Mr. Tefft Johnson, a prominent actor of Washington, D. C., writes from Fourteenth and "P" streets: "In the effort to improve a condition impaired by overwork I have found nothing that has done as much good as Peruna."
- Builds Up the Entire System.
Miss Jennie Johnson, 3118 Lake Park avenue, Chicago, Ill., is Vice President of Chicago Teachers' Federation. She writes: "Peruna restores the functions of nature, induces sleep and builds up the entire system."
- Makes Steady Nerves.
D. L. Wallace, Charter Member International Barbers' Union, 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota, writes: "I now feel splendid. My head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy my food and rest well."
- Splendid for the Nerves.
Robert B. Mancell, the famous actor, writes from New York City: "Peruna is splendid and most invigorating—refreshing to the nerves and brain."
- For General Debility.
Hon. Jno. V. Wright, of the Law Department, General and Office of Tennessee, writes: "I wish everyone who is suffering with general debility or prostration could know of Peruna."

AN AMERICAN CAREER.

Low Charles R. Flint Laid the Foundation for His Millions.

In 1857, in the graduating class of the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, was a youth of 17, named Charles R. Flint, says a writer in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. He was born in Maine, but raised in the City of Churches. At that time he had earned an enviable reputation for industry, application and good power for work. He was not a brilliant scholar or speaker, but in the Milton Literary club, composed of the brightest students of the institute, he was regarded as one of its ablest members.

After graduation he entered into commercial life and became first a clerk and then a junior partner in a small shipping house known as William H. Grace & Co. The firm had an appointments office in downtown New York, and was indispensable to the business of the city.

Through the genius of his members, and especially of Flint, it was destined to become a great financial power and its members to be multi-millionaires.

The young man applied to business the same principles that had made him successful in the institute. Within ten years he was a wealthy man. At 40 he was worth more than a million; today he is ranked among the great capitalists of the world.

Education and Production.

Massachusetts spent in 1898-99 $12,241,523 more upon her public schools than Tennessee. Each one of the 2,805,346 citizens of Massachusetts—men, women and infants—has a productive capacity of $24.0 a year, against $17.0 a year for the average inhabitant of the whole United States and $11.0 a year for the average inhabitant of Tennessee. This means that the people of Massachusetts earned in that year $22,457,149 more than the same number of average people of the United States and $408,900,824 more than the same number of people in Tennessee. Twelve million dollars invested in superior education yield $400,000,000 a year—World's Work.

Housecleaning Time.

This is the time of year when every family man wishes that he had considered the matter more seriously before he decided to actively engage in the raising of a family. He may be a loving father, an indulgent husband, a patriotic citizen, and all the other good things that we say about a fellow when he shuffles off this mortal coil and hies himself to that bourne from which no traveler returns, and still, in spite of all these exemplary qualities the chances are dollars to doughnuts that he thinks it time to quit when housecleaning commences.

About the only consolation a married man finds in a cold, backward spring is that it is delaying housecleaning just that much. He knows that it is just as bound to come as death, measles, and other disagreeable things, but still he welcomes every cold day and seems to hope that some revulsion of nature will cause a ship-in-the-sal proceeding that invariably overtake every well regulated household. While the woman of the house can hardly keep her hands from the tacks in the carpet, if the spring is at all backward, the man, that most terrible being of all the animal kingdom, hopes against hope for the respite that never comes, and as the time draws nearer and nearer, his nerves become drawn so tense that he starts at every sound like a startled murderer and views the absence of a single chair from its accustomed place with suspicion.

Maybe he has at last made himself that he is going to escape the ordeal, when, some bright sun shiny morning he is awakened rudely from his warm couch to the realization that the calamity is upon him. He knows what is coming but still he may hope that it won't be as bad as he has been picturing it, only to find perforce that it is worse. How valiantly he starts at taking down stove pipes, pipes that he struggled with only a few short months before to get into place, at which time he probably shocked his whole family by the language he used while trying to jam a six inch pipe into a five inch hole. Now they stick as if they had grown together and the misguided individual who carries the whole thing on his back, but alas, he finds he was mistaken, and the reproachful looks of his better half haunt him during the time he is at the office trying to brush the dirt from his clothes and get himself into presentable shape. A cold dinner eaten almost any old place in the house and made up of a very questionable lot of grub, does not improve matters, and the smell of soap suds and paste and paint other obnoxious things all contribute their mite toward the general mix up.

There are many different ways of cleaning house, none of them are good ways, but some are not so bad as others. Some women clean by first installing a plan while others start the hat rolling by ripping the entire inwards out of a house, so as to make all the other inmates as miserable as possible, then the lady of the house assumes a severe look and goes about with her most forlorn dress on and with her hair awry and apparently enjoys the trouble she has wrought with a morose, tragic and at times sorrowful manner that will always be a mystery to man.

So it goes and it generally lasts about a week and when at last the householder has given up all hope of any improvement he returns some evening to find everything back in its proper place and he sinks back to rest with a sigh of relief, and probably, if of a forgiving nature, contemplates to even smile once or twice during the evening. He knows it will come again but makes the best of it and thinks about more pleasant things.

Additional Local.

An item floating around the country credited up to "Ex," very truthfully says: "We feel sorry for the man who does not read his home paper. He is no better than a man without a country. He is like a homeless cow that has no regular pasture but grazes around promiscuously on weeds and thistles. No matter what paper he may read, the solid straight-forward citizen insists upon having his home paper."

"Are you prepared for death?" the clergyman asked as he took the sick woman's hand in his own. A shade of patient thought crossed the invalid's face and she said, "she didn't hardly believe she was: there was a little bedroom carpet to be taken up yet, and the paint upstairs had hardly been touched, and she did want to put up new curtains in the dining room, but if she didn't die until next Monday she would be about as ready as a woman with a big family and no girl, ever expected to be."

On Monday John Flanagan, the Canadian government land agent, left for Alberta, Canada, with a colony of about forty people, who were going to take up homesteads in the new country. The Canadian government offers homestead rights to settlers that there are thousands of square miles that are not taken up. One of Mr. Flanagan's arguments in favor of the country is that there is very little timber to obstruct the clearing of land, but it would seem as though this point would not carry much weight with a class of men who have found the wood on their land one of the chief mainstays while building themselves a home.

L. Finch of New Route was in the city on Monday getting facts and figures relative to the newspaper business. The railroad fight over in Adams county has brought about a peculiar state of affairs. The two newspapers in Friendship have seen fit to side with the railroad company on the bond issue matter and the opponents of the measure claim that the editors have refused to publish any communications that in any way oppose the interests of those who desire the issuance of the bonds. In view of this state of affairs they propose to establish a newspaper, which they call the "Friendship," and thus air their side of the question. "As Friendship is but a small place it is evident that somebody will be in on a losing proposition provided the other paper is established."

This little yarn which has been published by not a few of the state papers which come to our table tells its own tale. A Nebraska minister, to test the effect of prospecting times upon his congregation, asked, "All in the house who pay their debts, stand up." Instantly every man, woman and child with one exception, rose to their feet. He seated the crowd and said, "Let every man who is not paying his debts stand up." The exception noted—a careworn, hungry individual, clothed in his last summer's suit, slowly assumed a perpendicular position, and leaned upon the back of the seat in front of him. "How is it, my friend," inquired the minister, "that you are the only one in this congregation who is unable to meet his obligations?" "I publish a newspaper," he meekly replied, "and my brethren here who just stood up are my subscribers, and—'Let us pray!'" exclaimed the minister.—Ex.

We call attention to the advertisement in this issue of Mr. H. P. Hamilton, Two Rivers, Wis., who desires to purchase all kinds of Indian relics of copper and stone, such as axes, knives, arrows, spears, pipes, etc. All pieces of copper are especially desirable. Almost every farmer finds such articles on his land during the spring and fall work, and sometimes valuable pieces are discovered. Persons who have anything of this kind, should write to Mr. Hamilton and state what they have, at the same time sending a rough tracing of each relic, made by laying the articles on a sheet of paper and running a pencil around the edge. All such letters will be promptly answered and a value put on the relics. Copper relics should be just as they are when found, as it destroys their value to clean them or to scrape off the green coating. Mr. Hamilton has a large collection of Wisconsin relics and is continually adding to it.

The New Northern Wisconsin.

Not so many years ago Northern Wisconsin was only known as a vast lumber camp. In this region the chop-axes and saws of the day rapidly turned the tall pine into building material. Then came the development of the mining industry and as time sped on manufacturers and farmers turned their eyes to the New North. They saw many opportunities for getting rich with the aid of the fine soil, the varieties of trees, iron ore, clay, kaolin and marl and now the busy hum of machinery in the shop and the work of the reaper on the farm plainly indicates prosperity. Although this country is rapidly settling, there are still plenty of opportunities as land is cheap and can be purchased on easy terms. Transportation facilities are of the very best for.

THE WISCONSIN CENTRAL RY. as its name indicates, runs through the very center of the state, thus offering unexcelled facilities for the markets of the world. Interesting booklets and maps can be obtained by addressing:

Wasp Stings are Fatal.

In an article on the stings of wasps a British medical journal cites the two following cases which have come under its notice: A strong, healthy girl of 27 was stung on the neck by a wasp and fainted. On regaining consciousness she complained of a general feeling of numbness and partial blindness and vomited; she suffered severe abdominal pain. She recovered in the course of a few hours. Two months later she was stung again, this time on the hand. Her face became flushed, she again complained of numbness and blindness, suddenly, became very pale, fainted and died 25 minutes after she was stung.

Another case was that of a girl of 22 years who was stung by a wasp behind the angle of the jaw. The sting was at once extracted and ammonia applied. In a few minutes she complained of faintness and would have fallen if she had not been supported. Her face assumed an expression of great anxiety and a few minutes later was tossing on the bed, complaining of a horrible feeling of choking and of agonizing pain in the chest and abdomen. Brandy gave no relief. There was nausea, but no vomiting. She rapidly became insensible and died 15 minutes after receiving the sting. The most probable explanation of such cases seems to lie in what is known as idiosyncrasy—that is, abnormal sensitiveness in particular individuals to certain toxic agents. It is well known that drugs vary much in action on different people. What is a safe dose for one is dangerously large for another. The inability of some people to eat strawberries or shellfish is another instance of the same phenomenon. The active agent of bee stings is generally believed to be formic acid. It, therefore, seems very desirable that we should have more accurate information regarding the action of this drug on different species of the lower animals and through them on man himself.

A Raging, Roaring Flood.

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Omaha said I had consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles by Johnson & Hill Co. and John E. Daly. Price 50c.

Council Room, April 9, 1901. Council met pursuant to adjournment. Mayor Goggins presiding. Aldermen present, Lutz, Reiland, Kruger, Pratt, Bundy, Otto, Anthofer, Oberbeck, Hill and Boles. The street committee made the following report:

To the Honorable, the Mayor and Common Council of the city of Grand Rapids, Wood county, Wisconsin: Gentlemen: We the undersigned, street committee beg leave to report as follows:

That pursuant to a resolution of the common council of said city authorizing and directing us to cause diagrams of the plans of sewerage for the several districts of said city to be prepared, showing the lots and parcels of land, main sewers, minor sewers, man holes, catch basins, and all other matters pertaining to the system, we employed E. I. Philileo, the city engineer for that purpose.

That after the said E. I. Philileo had completed such diagrams, we caused the same to be filed in the office of the city clerk and pursuant to section 925, sub-division 210, Wisconsin statutes of the year 1898 and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, we caused a notice to be published in the Wood County Reporter, the official paper of the said city, that said diagrams were so on file in the office of the city clerk, for more than four weeks prior to March 27th, A. D. 1901, once in each week for five (5) days, the said notice being within thirty days of said 27th day of March, A. D. 1901. Being the day set for the hearing by said committee to consider any objections to said plans, that may have been filed and to hear all persons who desired to be heard with reference thereto as provided by said section 925 sub-division 210 of Wisconsin statutes and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

That on said 27th day of March, A. D. 1901, we met at the office of the city clerk in the library building of said city of Grand Rapids, pursuant to said notice and remained in session from 9 o'clock A. M. until 5 o'clock P. M. That no one appeared to be heard on said diagrams and that no objections had been filed with the city clerk to said diagrams or any part thereof.

We therefore report the said diagrams and the whole thereof, as and for the plans of sewerage for the several districts of the said city of Grand Rapids and recommend that pursuant to section 925 sub-division 212 of the Wisconsin statutes for the year 1898 and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto complete diagrams like unto the diagram hereto annexed be prepared in duplicate and certified to be correct by the undersigned committee, and that such diagrams so certified be filed in the office of the city clerk of the city of Grand Rapids and in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Wood county.

Dated this 9th day of April, A. D. 1901. JOHN SCHNABEL, DAVID LUTZ, JR., N. REILAND, G. M. HILL, Street committee.

sewerage for said district No. 1 and that they report thereon to the next regular meeting of the common council together with an estimate of the costs of the construction of such sewers.

Resolution unanimously adopted. Alderman Lutz offered the following resolution:

Whereas, the diagrams of the plans of sewerage of several districts of the city of Grand Rapids, Wood county, Wisconsin reported to us by the street committee, have been carefully and fully examined;

Be it resolved, That we approve of said plans as reported and proposed by the report of the said street committee and we do hereby authorize and direct the street committee to prepare in duplicate, complete diagrams of the plans of sewerage of the several districts of the said city and to duly certify to the same as being correct and that one to be filed in the office of the city clerk of Grand Rapids, and three to be filed in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county.

A petition signed by F. Phiffer and others, asking the laying of sewer and water pipes at certain places in the Sixth ward, was on motion referred to street committee.

The following petition was presented.

To the Mayor and Common Council of the city of Grand Rapids, Wood County, Wisconsin:

Whereas, the Consolidated Water Power Company intends this season to develop the water-power on the Wisconsin river in said city by the construction of a dam and, whereas, the location of said proposed dam has not yet been definitely settled upon, and whereas, the city of Grand Rapids claims to be the owner of the riparian and flowage rights, a part of and appurtenant to and connected with the lands in said city formerly known as the F. L. Witter lands, and conveyed to said city by Warranty deed from F. L. Witter to the city of Grand Rapids, Wood County, Wisconsin, dated March 21st, 1895, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Wood County, Wisconsin, on March 23rd, 1895, in volume 31 of Deeds, on page 443, 444 and 445, and whereas, it is the purpose of said company to so develop said water-power as to be perfectly safe in every way to the inhabitants and property of said city.

We therefore respectfully petition your honorable body to pass a resolution authorizing said company to develop said power by the construction of a dam within the corporate limits of said city at such point or place and according to the plans and recommendations of the engineers of said company, without claim of damage or other hindrance by said city on account of said F. L. Witter property or otherwise.

Dated this 9th day of April, A. D. 1901.

The Consolidated Water Power Co., Per N. J. Hays, President.

Moved and carried that the above petition be referred to a committee of three to be appointed by the mayor, said committee to report at the next meeting.

The city engineer reported the most feasible way of draining the north-west part of the city. Report received and ordered filed.

The city physician made the following report:

To the Honorable the Common Council:

In conformity with the duty imposed upon the health officer, I have the honor to render you my report for the year ending March 31, 1901. The total number of deaths was sixty, twenty-four males and thirty-six females, twenty-two were children under two years of age and were due to intestinal troubles. Diphtheria and typhoid fever caused two deaths each, consumption six, cancer three. The remainder were due to various other causes. The total number of births I am unable to state as very few were reported to this office. The present legislature will probably pass some law regarding the reporting of births by which better results can be obtained hereafter, than under the present law. A comparison of the death rate, birth rate, causes of death number and kinds of diseases, of this year with previous years can not be made as no previous reports have ever been made.

The general health of the city has been good, no epidemics have visited us except the mumps and LaGrippe. Five cases of diphtheria were reported with two deaths, seven cases of scarlet fever with no deaths. These cases were scattered about the city and were prevented from spreading by strict quarantine and thorough disinfection, quite a few cases of typhoid occurred, but only five were reported, the physicians in charge not knowing that it should be reported. Two deaths resulted from it.

The water furnished by water works of the west side is I believe unfit for drinking purposes. No examination of it has been made neither has any disease been traced directly to it, still, its use, I believe, accounts in great measure for the greater prevalence of typhoid on that side. Some portions of our city are not in good sanitary condition on account of poor drainage. Steps should be taken to improve at least the worst places. A particularly bad place is in rear of Mr. Stahl's residence in the first ward.

The city should have a dumping ground and furnish for a short specified time each spring collectors to gather such garbage as the people have, provided it is in piles or boxes. The people should be notified when the collectors are to be around so they can have their premises cleaned and the rubbish, etc. ready for the collectors.

The salary of this office should be increased as it is entirely out of proportion to the time and work the office should receive. Yours respectfully, FRANK POMAINVILLE, Health Officer.

CHAPTER XVIII.

It was two hours after midnight when Falkland trimmed the lamp, stirred up the fire and sat down before it. He had, as agreed between him and Corke the evening previous, sent Redding, his valet, to the Jew's, and as he had not yet returned he had reason to believe that there had been no remission on the part of his confederate. He looked anxious, pale and haggard, and started at every noise. At last, light and cautious footsteps were heard in the passage. Then came three loud knocks at his door.

"It is Corke's signal," said he, rising. "Neither of them spoke till Corke had entered and the door was again secured."

"I've been waiting for you, what has seemed to me an age," Falkland then said. "How does the business prosper?"

"Well."

"Redding—is he cured of his curiosity?"

"Yes, and his silence secured. If the cure and the curiosity can be effected by cold steel."

"May I dare venture abroad?"

"Dare you venture abroad?" repeated Corke, in a sneering tone. "Yes, if you wouldn't draw suspicion on yourself."

"But it seems to me that everybody I meet will read the deed I've consented to in my eye."

"You think that sitting mewed up here all day will carry with it an air of innocence? You are mistaken. 'Twill be the reverse of that."

"I wish I hadn't meddled with the matter. The least sound startles me. Not long before you came the noise made by a half-starved rat, as I afterward found it to be, rubbing at some bones Redding left by his plate when he ate his supper, made a cold sweat start to my forehead."

"You thought it was his ghost, I suppose; but as giving bones a second picking was a piece of economy he would have despised when living, you might have been certain he wouldn't have taken to it after he was dead."

"I wish I could carry as light a heart in my bosom as you do, Mark! Didn't you hear a noise? There are footsteps on the stairs; they are bringing the body here."

"There you are mistaken. It hasn't been found yet."

"Not found?"

"Of course not. How could it be seen in the dark? Come, it is time that you were abroad, making loud and earnest inquiries for your valet."

"His name would stick in my throat like Macbeth's amen."

"Say that you sent him to the Jew to pay a hundred pounds, and haven't seen him since."

"Was the body left there?"

"Where do you mean?"

"In the little dark court you spoke of."

"Yes, and the bond you had the good luck to get hold of in the morning is lying close by. It cannot fail to be seen."

"And suspicion will fall on the Jew?"

"There can be no doubt of it."

"I would that it might be otherwise. He never did me any harm."

"You should have thought of that before. There's no help for it now, unless you feel disposed to shift the burden of the crime on to your own shoulders, or it may be on to mine. But I've a way to manage that, and you won't dare do it."

"I shan't attempt it."

"They proceeded in the direction of the Jew's house. Before it was fairly light the Jew had been left alone with his household. Mizar opened the shop door. Then the ground, only a few steps distant, drew his attention. On examination the appearance of the muddy soil showed that some heavy weight had been dragged along, near the front of the building, and thence to the entrance of the court to which Corke had alluded. He returned quickly to the shop and made known to his master what he had seen."

Aspen had now risen, and as directed by the Jew, took a lamp and followed him and Mizar into the court. By holding the light close to the ground the marks were still traceable. They terminated at the further side of the court, near a pile of rubbish. There was a small pool of blood, near the edge of which lay a piece of folded paper, crumpled and defaced by many a sanguinary stain.

On closer inspection they found that the pile of rubbish had been disturbed, and Mizar, in obedience to the command of his master, commenced removing a portion of it, to see if anything was concealed beneath it. He had made but little progress in his task when he and the others looked round and beheld several men standing at the entrance of the court, one of whom they knew to be a magistrate.

"I arrest all three of you, in the king's name," said he, advancing towards them. "For what reason?" said the Jew.

"You, on a charge of murder, and these, your servants, as accomplices."

"Who accuses me and my innocent servants of so foul a crime?" demanded the Jew.

"And whom does he accuse me of murdering?"

"It is hardly necessary that you should be told that it is Redding, his valet, whom he sent to you last night to discharge a debt of a hundred pounds, for which you held his bond."

"I didn't see Redding last night, nor has the debt been paid."

"What is that you have in your hand, old man?" said one of the constable's assistants.

"I cannot tell. I found it lying on the ground, and I have not yet had opportunity to examine it."

"I will save you the trouble," said the constable, taking it from him and unfolding it, he held it to the light. "It is Gilbert Falkland's," he added, "which he gave you for the hundred pounds."

"That cannot be," replied the Jew.

"It can be, and of itself would be sufficient evidence of your guilt. It is plain that to regain possession of it after it had been paid, urged you to commit the crime."

"The debt hasn't been paid, and, of course, I never gave up the bond."

"See for yourself."

The Jew turned pale as he looked at it, for it was, or appeared to be, as the man had said, a bond for a hundred pounds, written by his own hand, and signed by Gilbert Falkland.

The constable's assistants went busily to work; some of them overturning the pile of rubbish, to see if the missing man was buried beneath it. The only thing of consequence that rewarded their search was a piece of velvet, to which was attached some tarnished gold lace, and which the keen eyes of Mizar at once detected to be of the same color and quality as a doublet he had seen worn by Falkland, and which he had probably transferred to his valet.

"Now," said the constable, "all three of you have the privilege of refreshing yourselves with a morning walk towards Newgate."

Just then Edward Elliston made his appearance. After returning home, he had discovered that the scarf belonging to Abi, which he had compelled the ruffian who was pursuing her to give up, and which, for present security, he had folded into a small compass and put into his pocket, was still in his possession.

The Jew looked at him, and emphatically pronounced the name of Abi. Elliston answered only by an expressive look, which the Jew rightly interpreted.

Alice and Abi had parted with many fond regrets, softened by a secret hope that they should see long meet again. Abi, with the opal clasped in her hand, which Alice could be persuaded to take from her, as soon as she was alone, threw herself on a pile of cushions. Her thoughts dwelt on Falkland and on Alice, though most of all, she hardly knew why, on Edward Elliston. Sleep stole upon her, in the midst of these her pleasant musings, and the hours which to him, her only relative, and to those who had so faithfully served him and her, were so full of anguish and fear, were to her, for a time, like shadows, brightened now and then with the dawn of a golden dream, but soon lost in utter oblivion.

CHAPTER XIX.

A heavy, lumbering coach, drawn by a pair of sleek, well-conditioned horses, which was moving slowly along one of the fashionable streets of London, seemed to particularly attract the attention of two men, who for some time had been loitering at the corner of an alley by which the street was intersected.

"That's it," said one of them.

"Are you certain?" said the other.

"Yes. Don't you see that the body of the carriage is bottle-green—that the horses are iron-gray, and that there isn't a speck of gilding about carriage or harness? Anybody might know that it belonged to a straight-laced Puritan."

"It is easy enough to tell that, but there's more than one straight-laced Puritan in the city who owns a coach and two horses."

"There's what do you think now?"

This question was elicited by the sight of a young and lovely face which appeared at one of the carriage windows.

"I think you are right," was the answer. "Russell-Cloak's face is one of those which is not easily forgotten."

"You understand your part of the same?"

"I am to be on the ground in season to lend my assistance—that is, if you go your part of the business so that it will be needed."

The other now hastened a few paces forward, so as to be a little in advance of the carriage, which was moving at a snail's pace. The man commenced crossing the street, and when directly in front of the horses, drew a large silk handkerchief from his pocket, which, heedlessly and unwittingly to all appearance, he flung full into the face of one of the animals, which had the effect to frighten both. They immediately commenced plunging and rearing, so as to become totally unmanageable, and before any of the street passengers had time to interfere, the carriage struck against the curbstone, and was overturned with a heavy crash. At the same moment, the horses, with a sudden bound, freed themselves from the pole of the carriage, and dashing madly forward, were almost instantly out of sight.

A strong, resolute looking countryman, who was the first to reach the broken vehicle, with some difficulty forced open the door. There were two ladies inside, the one whom the man had called Russell-Cloak, being young and very lovely, and will be recognized as Alice Dale; while the other, whom the countryman, who had succeeded in opening the door, at first sight imagined to be dead, was Mrs. Elliston. This, too, was the thought of Alice, who, though much frightened, had, with the exception of a sprained wrist, escaped unharmed. By this time, Clarence Harleigh had come to their assistance, who had seen from the window of a house close at hand what had happened.

"Alice, are you hurt?" were his first words.

He then directed the countryman to assist him in carrying Mrs. Elliston to the house where he had witnessed the disaster.

"Keep close to us, Alice," said Harleigh. "But a man whom he had rebuked for his officiousness had already stepped

in between them, so as to prevent her from complying with his request.

The next moment, the crowd, which the accident had attracted to the spot, had closed round her. Being hemmed in on every side, she could see nothing of Harleigh, so that even if she could have freed herself from the entanglements of the throng, she would have been at a loss where to go.

"Can you tell me, sir," said she, speaking to a decently clad man who stood near her, "where they have carried the lady who was in the carriage with me when it was overturned?"

"I can," said the man who from the first had showed himself so officious, "and with your permission, will, with much pleasure, conduct you to where you will find your friends. Hold fast by my arm, and if these knaves don't choose to fall back and give their betters a free pass, I will give them a lesson in manners which they won't soon forget."

"When I have a mind to take a lesson in manners," said a man whom he roughly pushed aside, "I shan't take it of one of Gil Falkland's lackeys, without giving him one in return," and to show that he meant as he said, he gave the man a sharp kick across the shoulders with his quarter-staff.

Alarmed at this, and still more at finding that the man who had offered her his aid was in the employ of Falkland, she let go of his arm and endeavored to make her escape.

"I would give you a taste of my rapier," said he, at the same time seizing hold of a portion of Alice's dress, "were it not that I have this lady under my protection."

"Release me—I beg that you will," said Alice, in violent agitation.

"Rapier or no rapier," said he who had dealt the blow, "as you seem to have undertaken to protect the lady against her will, you shall have further proof of the virtue of this oaken cudgel, if you don't let her go."

The earnest and elevated tone of voice in which this was said, as well as the words themselves, served to indicate to Harleigh the place where Alice was to be found. The exclamation of joy uttered by Alice at Harleigh's appearance would of itself have showed her sturdy defender that she had no reason to distrust him as a protector. He now showed his good will by preceding Harleigh and Alice, and rendering their egress from the crowd less annoying.

"Likely enough, for you have seen me once, I am certain."

"So am I, but when and where, I've no recollection."

"Don't you remember that the king graciously admitted me to his presence, at Whitehall, not many weeks ago?"

"Yes, yes—I remember it well," said Harleigh, with some difficulty repressing a smile, as he recalled to mind Hendrick Dykes and the carefully preserved curri-comb.

"Why, if I'd been a prince," said Hendrick, with great unction, "the king couldn't have treated me better. Margery wouldn't exchange the silk gown he ordered to be sent her for a queen's crown. He stole right into our hearts, and will keep there as long as we live."

They had by this time reached the steps of Mrs. Selwyn's door, where stood the countryman who had assisted Harleigh in removing Mrs. Elliston from the broken carriage and carrying her into the house. He proved to be a friend of Hendrick's, who had come to the city in company with him and his wife Margery. Having a second time received the cordial thanks of Harleigh, to which were added those of Alice, they took leave, equally pleased with themselves and with those who had shown themselves so ready to appreciate their services.

A surgeon and Edward Elliston, who were immediately sent for, had now arrived. On examining the patient, it was found that the skull was so badly fractured it was necessary that a portion of it should be removed. All thoughts of her being carried to her home were, therefore, for the present abandoned. By the time the operation was over, which was successfully performed, Alice found that her wrist, which she had imagined to be only slightly sprained, was much swollen and began to be excessively painful. This would render it impossible for her to besow on Mrs. Elliston those numerous little attentions which she otherwise would have done, although a reliable and experienced nurse had been promptly sent for by Edward.

"I will supply your place, dear Alice, as far as I can," said Abi. "It will prevent my thoughts from dwelling so constantly on him whom I am not allowed to minister to."

Thus, by a combination of painful circumstances, Harleigh and Alice, Mrs. Elliston and Abi were brought together under the same roof. The promise made to Mr. Walworth by Harleigh was a second time unintentionally broken, while Mrs. Elliston, still in a state of insensibility, was waited on and watched over with the tenderest care by her to whom, in the hour of deep affliction, she had refused her aid and sympathy.

CHAPTER XX.

The next session of the Old Bailey having been close at hand, at the time of the Jew's arrest, the day for his arraignment soon arrived. The strict search which had been made for the body of the valet had proved unsuccessful, a circumstance which, in the minds of many, told against the prisoner, as it was generally thought that he could, if he had been so minded, point out the place of its concealment.

Early in the day crowds of people, consisting of almost every degree, were seen hastening to the place of trial. A host of witnesses had been summoned in behalf of the prosecution, while there were none, except Clarence Harleigh and Edward Elliston, Alice and Abi, who had anything to testify which would be favorable to the prisoner. A few witnesses for the prosecution remained to be examined, when a billiard was put into Harleigh's hand.

"If you are a friend to Jeduthun, the Jew," it said, "come without delay to the house directly opposite where he used to live."

Harleigh, having with some difficulty worked his way through the crowd, hastened to the house designated. Before he had time to knock the door was opened by a middle-aged woman.

"Follow me," said she, and she led the way up a dark, narrow staircase. At its termination, she opened a door. "Enter," said she, and then, without another word, withdrew.

He obeyed, and found himself in a comfortable looking bed chamber, where, seated in a deep, stuffed chair, was a young man so thin and pale, that his appearance was almost ghastly.

"You don't recognize me?" said he. "I do not," was Harleigh's answer. "There are those who will know me, and who would rather meet a famished wolf in their path than to see me. I am, or was, Gilbert Falkland's valet."

"Do you mean him supposed to have been murdered?"

"I am he."

"This is indeed strange and unlooked for. Judging by your pale looks, and the deep scar on your forehead, you have been near death's door."

"Within a single step, as I am told by those into whose care I fell."

WAVE SAVED THE VESSELS.

It Interposed Between Two Ships in Time to Prevent a Collision.

Captain Burch, of the British ship Cawdor, from Newcastle, N. S. W., tells of a narrow escape his vessel had from colliding near the Australian coast with the schooner Golden Shore.

A hurricane was raging when the ships nearly came together, and a big wave which came along at the opportune moment averted a disaster. The Golden Shore is owned in San Francisco and was lumber laden.

"The Cawdor was in ballast and a gale arose. In a few hours its fury became terrible. Captain Burch soon realized the folly of sailing in such a sea, and every yard of canvas was stripped from the masts. There was nothing to do but drift, and this the ship did for some time. Soon the bare masts of the schooner Golden Shore were in sight, she also drifting rapidly in the storm.

As the ships neared one another their positions became perilous. The terrified crews were unable to control them and looked for nothing but the sinking of one or both of the vessels. The Cawdor bore straight down toward the big schooner with a force that meant destruction.

But a few seconds more and the vessels would have crashed together had not something occurred that filled the sailors with wonder. A great wave, as if conscience-stricken, rose between the craft and turned the nose of the Cawdor just enough to prevent the crash that seemed unavoidable. She just missed the Golden Shore. So close were the vessels as the ship fled broadside by the schooner that one could have jumped from the Cawdor to the Golden Shore. Captain Burch says:

"When the vessels slipped by one another a cheer went up from 100 voices. The Golden Shore drifted on, but in the distance it was seen that she had turned completely around. The Cawdor was uninjured.—San Francisco Call.
